EDITOR'S NOTE

ear reader, first I want to commend the intentionality and keen interest it must have taken to purchase the magazine in your hands. This edition was written from sheer passion and optimism, enough to weave together inspiration and entertainment in the most dynamic way.

I am immensely honoured to write the introduction of the Stream Magazine 2022 edition as when I was young, I saw an Editor-in-Chief portrayed in a movie, and had dreamt to be one eventually, regardless of how little I understood of what the role required. Back then it was simply an innocent dream, and now, it is so humbling to see it play out in its own time. It has truly been a satisfying experience and I remain grateful for the opportunity.

This year's edition is themed 'The Creative Revolution.' The reason for this is simple enough. History has recorded various revolutions that have reshaped the economy and in turn our way of life. These changing tides introduced new industries and drastically changed and informed the public's appetite across the various sectors. New jobs were formed, and the old—the 'irrelevant' jobs were swept off the economic playground and became obsolete. Now, experts say that we are living in the third industrial revolution or the digital revolution. This age has seen the demise of jobs that do not contribute to the digital economy. Adapt or die. In this age, the future of publishing is being contested. Would it survive or would it, like others before, fade before our very eyes? Creative revolution, in this context, speaks to the power of the publishing industry to withstand the age of the machines, because in terms of creative capacity, machines cannot compare to the wonder that is the human brain, and seeing as journalism is one of the most creative roles ever to be invented by man, we believe that it is here to stay, and would be one of those left unmoved after the third wave has passed. It would go through changes, yes, and adopt new methods, but it would still stand.

This edition is therefore an ode to creativity and the creative minds who have written and curated the content in order to produce a magazine that is worthy of your time. This edition does what it sets out to do by ensuring that beyond information, you enjoy works written with as much artistic precision that breathes new life into the mundane and familiar. We cover a range of interests from technology to the arts, inspiring personality interviews to entertainment, and sports to lifestyle content, amongst others. You are ensured of a carefully crafted collection of content that would leave you frantically flipping at the pages, hungry for more.

There are various support systems whose contribution to the success of this magazine cannot be overstretched. First, to God, the ultimate creative mind that supplied us with ideas, direction, and strength throughout the journey, I want to give my sincere appreciation. I would also not have been privileged to see this edition realised if it were not for the support of Dr. Kehinde Oyesomi, the Head of Department for Mass Communication, Covenant University whose innovative mind ensured the curriculum was explored qualitatively by providing the facilities for our basic duties to be carried out during production. Also, to the lecturers of Mass Communication whose expert tutelage of journalistic principles and skills have cumulated into the work we have compiled in this edition.

I extend my gratitude also to our course instructor, Prof. Oladokun Dmojola for the wealth of experience he poured into the magazine to ensure that the most minute details maintain the quality and standard that has become synonymous with Stream Magazine over the years. He is truly a world-class instructor. Equally, we thank the assistant lecturer, Dr. Darlynton Yartey, a man of useful insight who gave us the avenue to explore our ideas and provided the needed direction to help us execute them. Also, for his more-than-handly suggestions that helped me in managing the editorial board. His instructions on the different management theories proved invaluable to my understanding of how best to get the most out of every member of the team.

I thank our partners who have stood with us right from the beginning. Some of whom are among the corporate giants in Africa. They have assisted us in producing a magazine that is regarded as one of the best of its kind, and we are truly blessed to have you on our end of the rope.

To the best team on the planet, the Editorial Board of Stream Magazine 2022, to those on the design team who gave creative direction for the magazine, and not least important, those who ceaselessly ensured that everyone participated and participated well, I want to say thank you. Here are your flowers. It was easily possible because of you, and I foresee countless milestones in your future. Also, to the rest of our coursemates who did not make the editorial board but sourced for adverts to finance this edition, you are truly appreciated.

Finally, dear reader, I would like to relay my tender gratitude to you, the creative force that is destined to spearhead major innovative and revolutionary projects that would influence, initiate, and design future economies. We hope you find it to be extremely practical, insightful, and invigorating. More importantly, we hope that it inspires you to dream up a creative idea, and in its own way, we hope it fuels your ingenuity.

Covenant University Bags Award for the Best Website, Portal System in the Country services and how dynamic the website is.

Organizers of the award said the essence of the 2022 awards was to celebrate the achievements and innovation of Nigerian Internet initiatives, showcase Nigerian businesses, individuals, charities, and public and private sector organizations that help to make the Internet a more secure, open, accessible, and rewarding experience for all. In addition, the goal was to identify how the use of the internet has made learning easy for students and tertiary institutions, taking into account the dynamism that has come into play in the global education system in the wake of the COVID-19 pandemic.

The Director, Vice-Chancellor's Office, Professor Omotayo Osibanjo, receiving the award on behalf of the Vice-Chancellor, Professor Abiodun H. Adebayo, said there was a need for more attention to be directed at public schools in the country, especially with the aim of making internet resources free and accessible to them. According to him, "No country records meaningful progress without a commensurate investment in education."

Professor Osibanjo said while many institutions, public and private, shuttered their campuses due to the COVID-19 pandemic, Covenant University was one of the very few whose academic calendar was not disrupted, as the University was able to switch and operate at the cutting-edge of ICT due to the robust investment in internet technology.

"What we enjoy at Covenant University is not available at most public tertiary institutions in the country. As we speak, students in such schools expend more money buying data, which is free in some countries, and our policymakers in the country need to do more in the area of education and internet accessibility, because education is key to any type of development we may be talking about," he added.

While the .NG Awards 2022 voting was open to the general public, a committee made up of representatives of NiRA Accredited Registrars, Executive Board Members, and the NiRA Secretariat acted as the jury, verifying the results and submitting them to NiRA's external auditors.

The recent huge investment by the ICT Sub-Committee of the Board of Regents in Covenant University on the University's website and portal system has started paying off, as the University has won the award for the Best Tertiary Institution website/portal at the 2022 .NG Award organized by the Nigeria Internet Registration Association (NiRA). The award was presented to Covenant after her website and portal system were adjudged the best .edu.ng website/portal in the country.

The metrics taken into consideration in arriving at the best were based on how current the website is, the level of local content on the website, ease of use, relevance of the website for delivery of educational

Covenant University's Vice-Chancellor Elected into the Association of Commonwealth Universities Governing Council

The Vice-Chancellor of Covenant University, Professor Abiodun H. Adebayo, has been elected into the Governing Council and Trustees, of the Association of Commonwealth Universities (ACU).

Elected alongside Professor Adebayo to the board were Professor Sir Hilary Beckles, of the University of the West Indies, Jamaica; Professor Barney Glover AO, Western Sydney University, Australia; Senior Professor Sudantha Liyanage, University of Sri Jayewardenepura, Sri Lanka; and Professor Wendy Thomson CBE, University of London, UK.

ACU Chief Executive and Secretary General, Dr Joanna Newman, while welcoming the five new members to the ACU's Council, said the Council represents the diversity and strength of Commonwealth cooperation and its Strategic Plan, 'The Road to 2030', which makes the case for a great part of Higher Education in addressing each of the 17 SDGs.

According to Dr. Newman, "I look forward to working closely with our Council members in our shared mission to build a better world through higher education."

The new Governing Council and Trustees will run the body for a period of three years, beginning from August 1, 2022. The Association of Commonwealth Universities was established in 1913, and has over 500 member institutions in over 50 countries across the Commonwealth and is the world's oldest international network of universities.

This elected body brings university leaders from ACU member universities around the world together, with a shared responsibility to oversee its strategic direction.

Professor Adebayo, representing Constituency III, said the platform to serve on the Governing Council of ACU was just God availing Covenant University another global stage to announce her to the world for the collective good of Africa. Constituency III of the Council comprises universities in East Africa, Southern Africa, and West Africa

ECOWAS Regional Conference: Covenant Students Excited About Prospects for Ending Gender Disparity, Women's Development

Four students from Covenant University were part of a team of student panellists and participated in the recently concluded ECOWAS regional conference, with the theme "Gender Transformative Human Capital Development", in Freetown, Sierra Leone.

The conversations of the conference were centred on education, professional skills development, employment, entrepreneurship, and financial inclusion as a means to increase female human capital development.

Attendees were equipped with the knowledge to break societal biases as they made lifelong connections with other brilliant minds. The conference featured notable speakers such as Vice President, ECOWAS Commission, Madam Finda Koroma; Associate, McKinsey Consulting, Mrs. Kemi Onabanjo; and Advisor of Dalberg Consulting, Chimdindu Oduwiegu, who are both graduates of Covenant University.

The 3-day conference attracted students from Anglophone universities across the continent, as they explored and developed solutions to the prevalent problems that African women and the girl child face in the academic environment, in the workplace, and in the contemporary world.

Recounting her experiences, one of the representing students, Adefuye Mofopofoluwa, a 300-level Mass Communication student at Covenant, said the conference was an eye opener, as the platform to interact with knowledgeable female technocrats and entrepreneurs has injected a new level of confidence to proceed as a change agent.

"It was a life-changing experience for me, and I look forward to impacting other people with the knowledge I have acquired. I got to see great minds from around the continent and to hear about the great things that young women across the continent are achieving," she added.

Another student representative, Ifi Favour, also said, "Prior to that day, I had always heard about gender disparity and the inequality towards women, but at that conference, I saw the statistics, the figures and I was first shocked. Then, I was motivated to do whatever I could to shorten the bridge and reduce gender inequality."

After extensive discussion and deliberation sessions on the first two days of the conference, the Vice-President of the ECOWAS Commission gave a keynote speech to wrap up the conference. She expressed her heartfelt gratitude to the student representatives for their presence and contributions at the event, while also assuring the University's representatives of a visit to Covenant University.

The regional conference held from Thursday, April 21 to Saturday, April 23, 2022, in Freetown, Sierra Leone.

World Bank, AAU, NUC Team Heap Plaudits on Covenant University's ACE Project

A team from the World Bank on Supervisory Mission to Covenant Applied Informatics and Communication Africa Centre of Excellence (CAPIC-ACE) has commended the state of readiness of the Centre to advance research endeavours that will meet the aspirations of the World Bank.

The Team Lead, Professor Thuo Simon Gikiri, an ICT expert from the World Bank, said the delegation was impressed with the quality of leadership the monitoring and evaluation team of the Centre was bringing to bear on its operations.

Professor Gikiri said the implementation supervisory mission visit was to review the Centre's progress thus far and to see where there was a need for improvement. According to him, "On this supervisory mission visit, we are here to help. See where your Centre is lagging behind the set timeline, so we can see how to help you gain speed."

He said it is the desire of the team to see that the African Centre of Excellence in Covenant becomes a unique Centre that will be very strong and deliver on its purpose and mandate.

Another member of the team, a STEM Expert from NUC and former Vice-Chancellor of the University of Ibadan, Professor Olufemi Adebisi Bamiro, said he was impressed with the strides that Covenant University has taken over the past years, noting it was a thing of joy to see her compete and perform excellently when placed side by side with the nation's first generation universities.

The Assistant Leader of CAPIC-ACE, Professor Emmanuel Adetiba, said some of the issues identified by the team are already attended to, with the Centre in the process of taking custody of HPA worth over N100 million, while an additional 24 servers are already in the works for installation that will make the Federated Genomic (FEDGEN) cloud infrastructure in the centre more of a continental operation that will cut across western, eastern, and southern African regions.

The Centre's Leader, Professor Ezekiel Adebisi, said CAPIC-ACE recognises the need to tweak the procurement process of the Centre so that reagents and other research materials needed to advance the work of the Centre can be quickly and speedily accessible to the students.

Professor Adebisi welcomed the recommendations of the team and promised that the Centre's leadership would work assiduously and tick through each of the recommendations made, thereby repositioning CAPIC-ACE as a Centre to be admired by the next visiting window.

In his remarks, the Vice-Chancellor, Professor Abiodun H. Adebayo, appreciated the visiting team for the quality of supervision done on the University's Centre of Excellence, noting that it has helped grow the international student profile of the Covenant.

Professor Adebayo said the Board of Regents of the University was passionate about the success of the Centre, which is why it has continued to approve requisite funds in a bid to make the Centre a success story from take-off.

COREN Visits Covenant University, Calls for full Adoption of OBE for all Engineering Programmes.

A team from the Council for the Regulation of Engineering in Nigeria (COREN) on accreditation visit to Departments of Chemical Engineering and Electrical and Information Engineering, Covenant University, has called for renewed scrutiny of engineering programme curriculum with the goal of repositioning the profession for global relevance.

The Team Lead, Dr Felicia Agubata (FNSE), said accreditation of engineering programmes is a major mandate of the Council, intending to enhance quality assurance and ensure that graduates of engineering programmes in all tertiary institutions in the country are sound, functional and efficient engineering personnel who can meet the challenges of the present and future society, and have the capacity to compete favourably with their counterparts anywhere in the world.

Dr Agubata said the Council's attention had been drawn to the general outcry by employers of labour, to the persistent skills shortage whereby academically sound engineering graduates are unable to express practical functionality on their jobs, thus creating a disconnect between what is taught and that which is expected of engineering graduates on the field. "Outcome-Based Education (OBE) is the missing link that will address these concerns. Thus, COREN adopting the OBE learning methodology for engineering programmes in Nigeria".

She commended the University Management for the robust curriculum used within the University system that has reflected positively in the lifestyle of her graduates and their comportment in the world of work. According to her, "Your products are distinct and unique in their disposition and conduct in the world of work. I have encountered them, and they stand different when compared to their peers. No doubt, you are doing something great and unique here that is in line with your vision of raising a new generation of leaders," he stated.

In his remark, the Vice-Chancellor, Professor Abiodun H. Adebayo, represented by the Registrar, Dr Oluwasegun Omidiora, commended COREN for putting together a robust team, cutting across the academia and industry, to undertake a huge national assignment like the accreditation exercise of engineering programme in the University, at such an auspicious time in the nation.

Dr Omidiora assured the team of the readiness of the University's Management and the eggheads in the College of Engineering to avail them the necessary cooperation towards making a success of the whole exercise.

Franklin University, Covenant University Talks Robust Partnership

The Vice President for Academic Quality and Planning at Franklin University, Columbus, Ohio, United States of America, Professor Patrick Bennett, has commended the leadership of Covenant University for its astute and pragmatic approach to driving excellence academically.

Professor Bennett said this during a courtesy visit to the University Management on Thursday, May 12, 2022. According to him, it is a blessing to be at Covenant University at the present time, as his intention is to learn how Covenant is operating and see the possibility of evolving a working relationship between both institutions. "I hope this is the first of many other visits, and possibly developing an exchange scheme between both universities," he added.

Professor Bennett, who was accompanied by Glory Oguegbu, a project partner, said, having learnt and read a lot about Covenant University, with a full understanding of what the university stands for, there is ample ground to be excited about the prospect and future opportunities for robust engagement between Franklin University and Covenant University.

Mr. Clemson Ayegbusi of the United States Consulate in Nigeria, who was part of the visiting team, said it is always an exciting and amazing experience for him whenever there is the need to visit Covenant, as it is one Nigerian university that the American Consulate education team is always ready to introduce to universities out there in the United States.

In his remarks, the Vice-Chancellor, Professor Abiodun H. Adebayo, appreciated the team for the visit, noting that it is important that the relationship be driven for maximum impact, as collaboration and a mindset of multilateralism are key to helping shape the new world knowledge economy.

Professor Adebayo said Covenant University has remained committed to its founding philosophy, mission, and objectives, which are appropriately determined by the university's core values in the quest to shape all graduates of the university into well-rounded global citizens. He noted that the Total Man Concept (TMC), Entrepreneurial Development Studies (EDS) and Towards a Total Graduate (TTG) are some of the university's customised programmes that have helped distinguish the university's alumni from their peers out there in the world of work.

Professor Adebayo reiterated the University's commitment to her International Visiting Scholars (IVS) scheme, as it has gone a long way in engendering the cross-fertilization of academic ideas. "We are open to new relationships cutting across resource sharing, faculty and student exchange initiatives, and a symbiotic partnership that will assist both institutions in driving excellence," he posited.

Present at the courtesy visit were the Registrar, Covenant University, Mr. Emmanuel K. Igbani; Director, Quality Assurance and Academic Standards, Professor Olubanke Ogunlana; Director, International Office and Linkages, Dr. Isaac Akinwunmi; and Director, Vice-Chancellor's Office, Professor Omotayo Osibanjo.

Covenant Graduate School's Biochemistry Programmes Bag International Accreditation

The Royal Society of Biology (RSB) has recently conveyed a successful result of its evaluation of Covenant University's Biochemistry programmes at the Postgraduate level for the Society's accreditation.

After going through the accreditation process, MSc, M.Phil/Ph.D and Ph.D Biochemistry received a 5-year full accreditation status. Further to this accreditation, the final-year undergraduate students of Biochemistry will receive one year of free membership of the Royal Society of Biology. This network will further serve as a professional leverage for Biochemistry students at the University when applying for jobs.

The RSB Accreditation programme champions excellence in the biosciences by not only identifying degree programmes that offer a high standard of teaching, curriculum provision and practical skill set development, but also those that enhance graduate employability skills.

The Royal Society of Biology is the leading professional body for the Biological Sciences in the United Kingdom. The Society represents over 17,500 biologists from all areas of the life sciences, as well as almost 100 organisations, which make up the diverse landscape of biology in the UK and overseas.

In his remark, the Vice-Chancellor, Professor Abiodun H. Adebayo, said while the entire University was enthused for this accomplishment, expectations are high with trust in God that other programmes will follow suit.

Covenant at 20: Elsevier Seeks Collaboration Towards Landmark Event

The Regional Account Manager – North, East Africa, and Country Representative of Elsevier in Nigeria, Mr. Amr Dahab, has harped on the desire to collaborate with Covenant University, towards the 20th anniversary celebration of the University later this year.

Mr. Dahab, speaking during a courtesy call on the University's Management said Elsevier was elated and wanted to celebrate the successes of the partnership with Covenant University, and as such, will be

Mr. Dahab congratulated Covenant University for the commendable performance they have continued to put on since she broke through the Times Higher Education Impact Ranking, reiterating that Elsevier was proud to be associated with the Covenant brand name.

The Director, Covenant University Centre for Learning Resources, Dr Mercy Iroaganchi, appreciated the support Elsevier as an organization has helped faculty and staff of the University over the years in driving quality research and publications.

looking forward to partnering with the University on its 20th anniversary.

He said Elsevier will be willing to collaborate with Covenant as the plans for the 20th anniversary unfolds, noting that Elsevier is willing to work with the University through the various marketing partners Elsevier has in the African region.

Dr Iroaganchi said it is with the renewed expectation that the University is looking forward to greater engagement in the areas of seminars, workshops and regular training sessions for members of the University community in the use of Elsevier's resources.

In his remarks, the Vice-Chancellor, Professor Abiodun Adebayo, appreciated Mr. Dahab and his team for the quality services that they have brought to bear on the University's learning space.

Professor Adebayo said the current foreign exchange monetary policy of the nation's apex bank has affected the mode of payment of the University's subscription, but the Management is determined to remain true to its financial obligation to Elsevier.

He told the gathering that while the University has improved on its impact ranking, the Management would not rest on its oars because the goal is to be among the world's top 10 and the journey to that destination is still a long way ahead.

Professor Adebayo appreciated Elsevier for all the training support made available to the University these past years while soliciting a more robust engagement down the road.

ARCON Accreditation Team Commends Quality of Covenant University's Advertising Programme

A team from the Advertising Regulatory Council of Nigeria (ARCON), on accreditation visit to the Department of Mass Communication, Covenant University, has heaped plaudits on the University for lifting the standard of the teaching of advertising in the nation.

The team leader, Dr Bel-Molokwu noted the sophisticated equipment in place for teaching future professionals in the advertising industry. According to him, "Your printing press is one of the best in sub-Saharan Africa."

The Registrar, Covenant University, Dr Oluwasegun Omidiora, said the University was mindful of operating at the cutting edge of technology, and would always do what was needed to give her students the necessary exposure towards readiness for the world of work.

In his remarks, the Vice-Chancellor, Professor Abiodun H. Adebayo, appreciated the team for the quality job done in the course of the accreditation exercise, noting that it was the desire of the Board of the University for her to operate at the very best level of global best practices, as the passion remained the emancipation of the black race from the back burner of global interactions.

Professor Adebayo noted that Covenant was committed to championing the desired change through the adoption and embracing of best peer review mechanism available in her quest to attain both her short and long term visions.

Present at the exit meeting of the ARCON team were the Dean, College of Management and Social Sciences, Professor Uwalomwa Uwuigbe; Director, Centre for Learning Resources, Dr Mercy Iroaganachi, Head, Department of Mass Communication, Dr Kehinde O. Oyesomi and Prof. Oladokun Omojola. Others are Dr Oscar Odiboh, Dr Darlington Yartey and Dr Thelma Ekanem.

CU Wins N75m JAMB Compliance Prize

Covenant University, Ota, Ogun State, has emerged the best in compliance with the policy guidelines of the Joint Admission Matriculation Board (JAMB) at the 2020 JAMB National Tertiary Admissions' Performance-Merit Award (NATAP-MAward).

The event held on Thursday, July 21, 2022, at the International Conference Centre, Abuja, during the admission policy meeting, chaired by the Education Minister, Adamu Adamu.

Covenant University emerged tops and was awarded a cash prize of Seventy-Five Million Naira (N75,000,000:00) and a certificate of award as the most compliant institution in keeping to the Admissions Guidelines of the 2020/2021 Admission Exercise by the Registrar of the JAMB, Professor Is-haq O. Oloyede, OFR.

Professor Oloyede said the total cash prize currently put at N500 million will be raised to N750million in the next edition of the awards, to accommodate different categories for universities, polytechnics, and colleges of education.

In his remarks, the Vice-Chancellor, Professor Abiodun H. Adebayo, who received the prize on behalf the University returned all the glory to God and appreciated the Chancellor and Chairman, Board of Regents, Dr. David O. Oyedepo, for his qualitative leadership and support to the University.

Covenant University's CEPDeR Hosts West Africa's First Summer Institute in Computational Social Sciences

A partner facilitator at the Covenant University Summer Institute in Computational Social Science (SICSS) from the University of Ghana, Legon, Dr Fidelia Duke, has reiterated the importance of getting a computational social science summer camp in West Africa, stating that the field of study promises to give a lot of opportunities to interested scholars.

Dr Duke said this during the opening ceremony of the first summer computational social science institute in West Africa, hosted by Covenant University. According to her, there are just a few computational social science institutes on the African continent, with most of them in Southern Africa, which was where most scholars interested in that area of knowledge were able to meet for the first time as organizers.

She said interactions in the past have necessitated the thought of what can be done to bring the study of computational social science to the doorstep of every African scholar. "That is what informed our taking our passion and drive to start a summer institute that is within the West African region, and this happens to be the first in the region," she added.

AIR FORCE PERSONNEL Drills CU Students on Career Prospects in the Military

A senior military personnel has stated that choosing a career is one of the most important decisions you will make in life. This is because a career is a person's course of progress through life or a distinct portion of life. The above submission was made by Wing Commander Michael Adekunle Oragbade of the Nigerian Air Force Base, Ikeja, at a recent Town and Gown Seminar of the Political Science and International Relations, Covenant University, Ota, where he was a Guest Speaker, on the theme, 'After Graduation: Career Dream and the Prospect of Becoming a Military Officer.'

Wing Commander Oragbade, who is also an Engineer and an Accountant, explained that the aim of his presentation was to educate undergraduates and postgraduate students in the Political Science and International Relations Department of Covenant University on the prospects of becoming military officers after graduation.

According to Oragbade, the average time an individual spends on the job yearly is approximately 71% of our lifetime; this comes to roughly 31 and a half years out of the 45 years most of us spend working, from the beginning of our careers until retirement. So, being in the wrong job or career path, he said, is to be in a constant state of depression.

great things through the development of their business ideas and building their God-given visions.

She pointed out the different issues that limits women in their efforts to establish successful businesses, which includes lack of funding, gender discrimination, poor education, etc. However, all these issues could be overcome when there is a determination to succeed. "To run a successful business in Nigeria, you must recognise the importance of networking and maintaining relationships. The men understand that and it is important that women begin to leverage on the importance of relationships to the growth and success of businesses too," she said.

The First Lady explained that running a successful business as a woman was also understanding how money works; "your money is the lifeline of your business so it is important to get some financial advice and then learn all you can about any venture you wish to go into".

"One of the factors that leads to success in business is learning how to manage and maintain relationships. Your business depends a lot on your relationships to succeed; that is why successful women have been able to also help other women and guiding them to succeed," she added.

Ogun First Lady Counsels Women on Paths to Success in Business

The first lady of Ogun State, Dr. (Mrs) Bamidele Abiodun has advised women on basic areas to focus on in order to ensure success in business. She gave this advice while making her presentation as a Keynote Speaker at a recent event hosted by the Covenant University Faculty Women Advance in collaboration with International Federation of Training and Development Organisations (IFTDO) to commemorate International Women's Day 2022, with the theme, 'Gender Equality Today for a Sustainable Tomorrow' #breakthebias.

While speaking on the need to advance the cause of women via economic empowerment, Mrs. Abiodun, a Philanthropist and a UN Ambassador on Sustainable Development, stated the need for women to position themselves to accomplish

SOTLAN: Covenant Graduate Student Comes Top in Students' Debate Competition

Postgraduate student, Prince Akachukwu, of Department of Biochemistry, Covenant University, came tops at the Students' Debate Competition at the 4th Annual Conference of Society of Testing Laboratory Analysts of Nigeria, held between 14 – 16 June 2022, in Ikeja, Lagos.

Akachukwu, a freshman M.Sc. student, participated in the debate titled 'Testing Laboratories Are Important in Improving the Quality of Life in Nigeria' during the conference of Public Analysts (COPA) 2022, and argued in favour of the topic.

Akachukwu attributed the feat to the support he got from the faculty-base of the Department, who he said were following up on him, and guiding him in putting together ideas and thoughts that galvanized him to success.

The Head, Department of Biochemistry, Professor Israel Afolabi, who was enthused by the award, said the feat was divinely orchestrated, noting that the application window for submission of entries was almost closed when they got wind of the competition.

In his remarks, the Vice-Chancellor, Professor Abiodun H. Adebayo, challenged Akachukwu and other students to always aim to be among the best in whatever they do. He noted that the University will keep supporting every student related activities, since they are the primary reason why the University exists.

A total of 9 entries came in from Covenant University, Bells University, Caleb University, University of Lagos among others, while 8 were shortlisted for presentation, with representatives from Covenant and Bells Universities showing up for the oral debate. Competing students were scored on the basis of both written and oral presentation: with consideration also given to appearance, comportment, and content. The theme for the COPA 2022 was 'Building Capacity for Global Competitiveness of Testing Laboratories in Nigeria.'

UNESCO YOUTH CLUB COVENANT CHAPTER COMMENCES OPERATIONS

n a bid to further entrench the core values of possibility mentality and responsibility in her students, Covenant University now has a United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation (UNESCO) Youth Club. The University's Chapter will serve as a converging point for all social-developmental programmes and associations on campus, just like UNESCO collaborates with many NGOs and smaller expert networks to organize programmes and execute projects.

Speaking at the inauguration of the club, the Dean, Students' Affairs, Professor Conrad Omohinmin, said the club is expected to become a rallying point for students in the University, with the aim of evolving solutions to local and global problems, by creating local solutions right here on campus..

Adeolu Adegboye, a 400 level student in the Department of Computer Science, said the association would become a veritable avenue for students to be proactive in creating solutions to some of the issues facing them and maximizing the opportunities that may appear as challenges. He believed that engagement on the platform of the UNESCO Youth Club would help create a greater sense of ownership and commitment in students towards the institution. "I want my fellow students to see this as a fulcrum for taking action, and move away from passivity, to being action-driven with the ultimate goal of a more mutual beneficial Covenant University", he added.

ARCON, NIPR Leadership Commends Covenant University Teaching Model

he Registrars of the Advertising Regulatory Council of Nigeria (ARCON) and Nigerian Institute of Public Relations (NIPR) have commended the management of Covenant University and the Department of Mass Communication for the quality academic resources injected into the programme.

The Registrar/CEO, of ARCON, Dr. Olalekan Fadolapo, represented by Mrs Ijedi Iyoha, Director, Regulations, Advertising Practitioners Council of Nigeria (ARCON), said Covenant University's initiative of bridging the gap between the town and gown is a resourceful enterprise that must be commended.

On his part, the Acting Registrar,

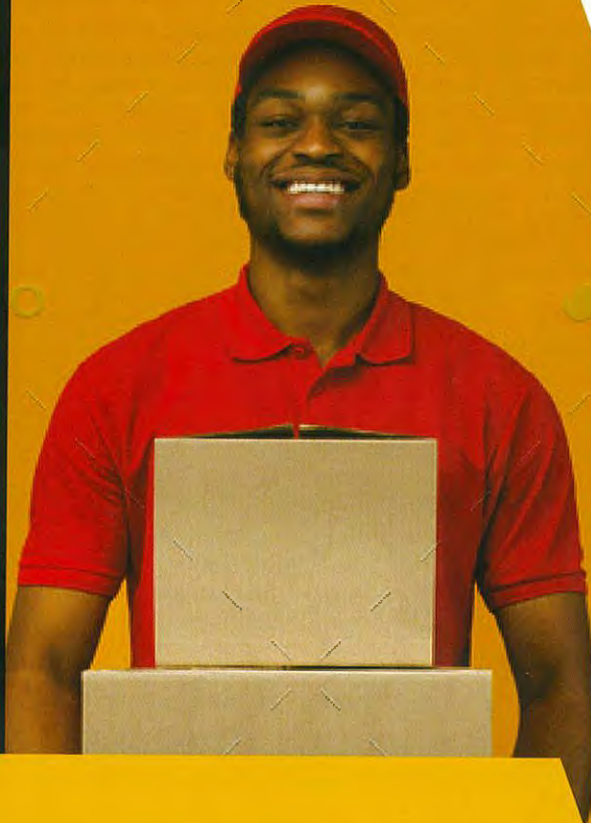

Nigerian Institute of Public Relations (NIPR), Mr. Kayode Yeku, thanked Covenant University for the Cordial relationship that exist between her and the institute. Mr Yeku said that Covenant has the highest number of student membership of the institute (over 300 student members), the highest of any tertiary institution in the country.

In his remarks, the Vice-Chancellor, Professor Abiodun H. Adebayo, appreciated the leadership of ARCON and NIPR, for being active partners in the quest for having graduates that are ready to add value to the world of work. Professor Adebayo said creating a platform for examining our communication students in the field of advertising and public relations is key in helping the University develop and embrace teaching models that readily addresses the needs of industries.

Also present during the courtesy visit were, the Acting Registrar, Covenant University, Mr Emmanuel Ighan; Dean, College of Management and Social Sciences, Professor Abiola Babajide; Director, Academic Planning Unit, Professor Phillip Aizebokhai; Director, Vice-Chancellor's Office, Professor Omotayo Osibanjo; Head, Department of Mass Communication, Dr Kehinde Oyesomi; and Dr Oscar Odiboh.

Expert Lectures CU Students on Processes for Media Start-ups from a Small Media Business Agency," at a recent Town and Gown Seminar of the Department of Mass Communication at Covenant University, Ota, where he was the Guest Speaker.

Mr. Padonu, who is also the Founder of Smartbrandsmedia, a Media Consultancy Agency, explained the process of flagging off a business, which is also a commercial enterprise, entrepreneurship or venture, as a process that begins by starting and that to start simply means to begin, which is to leave a state of inertia and move forward and then begin to run, which has to do with functionality and then moving ahead to generate funds.

He also pointed out that agency emanates from the word agent, which means, "to act on behalf of another, or entrusted with the concern of another." He said the media industry is a world of opportunities valued at billions of dollars and there is something for everyone who has an interest in media and is willing to put in the work.

A media guru, Mr. Oluayinka Padonu, has defined entrepreneurship as the act of setting out on your own and starting a business instead of working for someone else in their own business; it is creating your own path, leading to financial freedom.

He made this assertion while making his presentation, titled, "How to Start, Run, and Make Income

Final Year Undergraduate Bags Cash Award for Academic Excellence

Through a stint of fate and hard work, a final year student at Covenant University has been rewarded for exemplary display of academic competence and excellence in her final year project.

Miss Oduwole Tamilore Oyinoluwa, a final year student of Industrial Relations and Human Resource Management in the College of Management and Social Sciences, has won the Professor Friday Okonofua Commendation Gift for an impressive presentation of her final year project work.

Professor Okonofua praised Miss Oduwole for her academic prowess and brilliance in her project dissertation. According to him, there is no doubt that Miss Oduwole is a first-class candidate. From her project introduction, theoretical review, data presentation, and analysis, you will see a clear work of science in her endeavour.

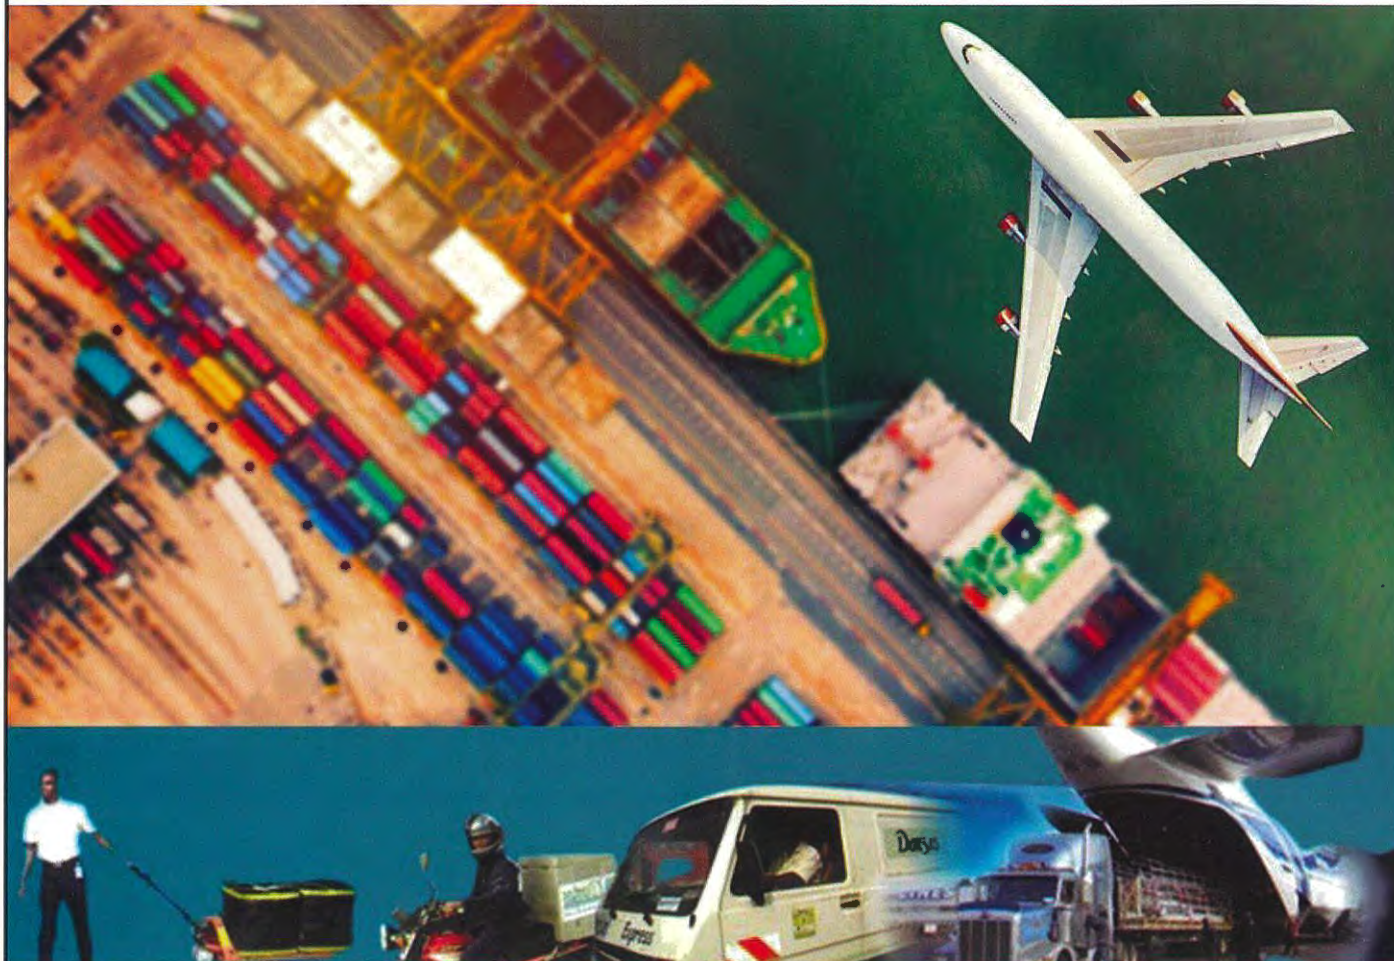

"I was very impressed with the young lady because she was able to defend her thesis impressively, and I told the Vice-Chancellor that if I was her external examiner, she would get a first class for that work. She was able to describe her methods, how she did it, and the results were unassailable. She was able to describe data analysis using SPSS, bivariate, and multivariate analysis, and she was knowledgeable enough to speak about the conceptual framework she chose, "he enthused.

Professor Okonofua, who came to Covenant University as the guest speaker at the 2nd Nigerian Academy of Science Lecture, gave a cash award of one hundred thousand naira (N100,000) to Miss Oduwole Tamilore Oyinoluwa for her project topic of "Effect of Psychological Capital on Employees' Performance: A Study of the Oil and Gas Industry in Lagos State."

2022 Career, Education Fair: Multinationals, Corporate Bodies Seek Covenant Graduates

It was a beehive of activities as Covenant University's Students' Engagement and Activities Development (SEALD) unit, in a bid to position graduates of the University at the forefront of employers' choice, organized the 2022 International Education and Career Fair with the theme 'Scaling Up.'

The event attracted top brand companies and leading multinationals including Boston Consulting Group (BCG), McKinsey Company, Jumia, Friesland Campina, Brown

HR Solution, and Alan & Grant, amongst other industry leaders, with the intent of getting over 30% of its graduating students employed before the academic session, and at the same time, preparing opportunities for those going on industrial work experience schemes in the next academic session.

Declaring the event open, the Vice-Chancellor, Professor Abiodun H. Adebayo, said the fair is fashioned to create an enabling environment for students and potential employers to meet, establish professional relationships, and discuss possible job or internship opportunities.

The events offered participating students the privilege to learn a lot, especially as it pertains to work place, industry, and education abroad, as the fair also featured interactive seminar sessions from seasoned speakers including: the immediate past Director, International Office and Linkages of Covenant University, Dr. Ada Peters; Business Development Manager, UNITEs Cisco, Yetunde Faseun; Human Resources Analyst, Alan & Grant, Joshua E. Edison; and Regional Human Resources Business Partner, Allianz Africa, Pelumi Omolua, amongst others, who took the registered participants through topics such as, 'Developing your Career Path, Personal SWOT Analysis, and Securing Admission into Ivy League Universities.'

The 2022 International Career and Education Fair was held from May 18th – 19th, 2022 at the school's ALDC auditorium and the cafeteria 2 multipurpose hall.

Students' Handbook: Ad-Hoc Committee Turns in Report

An 8-man Ad-Hoc Committee saddled with reviewing the Covenant University Students' Handbook ahead of the new academic session has turned in their report. The Chairman of the committee and Dean, Students' Affairs, Professor David Imhonopi, while delivering the revised handbook, said the assignment was diligently carried out with members reading through the previous handbook towards making informed adjustments where necessary.

Professor Imhonopi said the general sitting of the committee availed members' ample opportunity to make appropriate amendments to accommodate the present realities of ICT and technology in the learning environment.

The Acting Registrar, Mr. Emmanuel Igbani, thanked the team for undertaking the gruelling and time-demanding task of ensuring that the content of the revised Students' Handbook stands the test of time when subjected to legal scrutiny.

In his remarks, the Vice-Chancellor, Professor Abiodun Adebayo, commended the committee for a good job done, noting that any system that is not open to a constant review process will go extinct.

Professor Adebayo noted that a continuous review exercise is vital to improved service delivery, which engenders steady ultimate growth and development of the University. He asked the committee to represent the report, highlighting new provisions and amendments as introduced into the Handbook, and submit the final draft to the University management.

The membership of the Ad-Hoc Committee was drawn from the Chaplaincy, Legal Unit, Students Support Programme Unit, Students' Affairs, Physical Planning and Development, and the Media and Corporate Affairs Unit of the University.

Don Canvasses Safe Management of Food Waste Towards Maintaining Food Quality, Safety, Economic Rebound

The management of food waste is a critical component of safe food, as waste not properly managed could constitute a safety challenge to the environment and compromise food quality and safety. This assertion was made by Professor Solomon Oranusi, a professor of microbiology at Covenant University, Ota, when he delivered the 28th Inaugural Lecture of the University last Friday, June 24, 2022.

Professor Oranusi, delivering a lecture titled "Safe Food for Sustainable Development of the Packets of Microorganisms Guided by Divine Essence", said over 50% of the food consumed in Nigeria is of satisfactory microbial load. However, poor environmental sanitation and personal hygiene of food handlers are the bane of food produced and consumed in Nigeria. He called for the education of food handlers, regular inspection of the foodservice environment, and enforcement of food safety rules and regulations to ensure compliance with best hygiene practices.

THE MASTERMINDS HAVE JOINED THE GROUP CHAT

Studying at Covenant University can get overwhelming. So, every Omega (second) semester, the university welcomes events organised to liven up the student body and bring the calm necessary to maintain the balance at one of the most high-performing universities in the country. In this edition, we have decided to spotlight the masterminds behind some of the amazing events held here at Covenant University. We have on this chat Mofope Adefuye and Favour Nelson, the Conveners of TEDx Covenant University, Osahon Ehanire, the Convener of The Garden Experience, Tolu Afilaka the Convener of Jokes on You, and finally Olamide Kuforiji, the Convener of the Gathering Worship Experience. These events were extremely impactful and helped us survive the intense drilling of the Omega semester. In this edition, we choose to stylize the format into something more unique. Our special guests give an inside peep into what it took to organize an event at the university and everything else that happened along the way. The best part? You get to snoop into this conversation and have these masterminds themselves lead the discussion without any intermediary. We have also maintained the original WhatsApp format to give you—our dear readers a unique and familiar experience.

Enough said...let's dive right in!

Stream: Good day Conveners of Covenant university. Might I say, thank you... our semester was a lot more colorful because of you. Also, thank you for agreeing to this interview. We would be doing things a lot differently today. This interview is more of a conversation/bonding session for you all, so feel free to ask one another whatever questions you like and pitch in whenever you feel you have something to say. Let the conversations begin!

Tolu Afilaka of Jokes on you: Let's do this.

Mofope of TEDxCovenantUniversity: Hi guys. So, my first question to you all is what inspired you to organize your event?

Mofope of TEDxCovenantUniversity: I think I should go first. 😊

For me, my inspiration came from my desire to make an impact. I came across a post on LinkedIn concerning TEDxOluloye and I did a little snooping to find out what it entailed and immediately knew that I wanted to make room for that level of impact at Covenant university. 🙌

Olamide Kuforiji of the Gathering Worship Experience: Hello everyone. As a community development enthusiast, event producer/director, and a music-entrepreneur, I could say the idea for the Gathering Worship Experience was a no-brainer. I identified a pressing need to see persons express themselves via music and through other creative means per time and I used the event as a means to address this need.

Tolu Afilaka of Jokes On You: Whoever wants to answer can jump on this. The question is, at what point did it hit you that the event was actually happening for real?

Mofope of TEDxCovenantUniversity: It became real for me when the speakers for the event were finalized, and we got approval from the management of the university. It was so surreal! The thing is I knew the event was going to happen before, but it became clearer or should I say louder that it was happening after the guest speakers had accepted our invitation. 😊

Favour of TEDxCovenantUniversity: I second that. 😊

Olamide Kuforiji of the Gathering Worship Experience: Well, in my own experience it was real from the point of ideation and more real when execution started. There were visible results even before the event happened. 🚀

But the process was not without its share of difficulties. So, does anyone want to share what challenges they faced bringing their event to a reality?

Osahon Ehanire of the Garden: Where do I even start? First, we had approval issues and that was the biggest problem we faced. Management had approved comedy shows, fashion shows, and the likes in time past, but the Garden experience was somewhat different from the rest of them. And we had to convince the management to approve the idea by selling it over, over, and over again until we began to see eye to eye. We also encountered the problem of finding an audience. People most times find it acceptable and delightful to watch a football match or watch some movie or come out to laugh at some jokes, they find it easy to do these things because honestly, these things are fun. So, we had to find a way to make people see that it was beneficial for them to come out and get inspired by people doing what they loved doing and also listen to some really good inspirational and life-changing speeches. We had to convince the market that we had the product they needed.

the CONVENERS OF CU

Favour of TEDxCovenantUniversity: This right here! Finding the middle ground is not always easy. But beneficial things can also be fun too. 🍷

Osahon Ehanire of the Garden: Exactly! But through the challenges, I have learnt that the brightest clouds come after the most brutal storms in life. I have discovered that God never sends you on a mission alone, and just like Moses, he would send you an Aaron, and just like Paul, he will send you a Barnabas. It was really difficult trying to balance everything, but I thank God for the people he sent to help me out and I just want to publicly appreciate every one of you. Thank you!

Favour of TEDxCovenantUniversity: 😊

Favour of TEDxCovenantUniversity: The challenges we faced while organizing TEDxCovenantUniversity happened when the roof of the venue we planned to use became faulty a few days before the event. Also, the week of the event, we found out that the mid-semester exam had been scheduled for the date we were already working towards, so we had to move the event. But ultimately, the event was a success despite all this, and I am grateful to God, and the organizing team for their unrelenting efforts in making the event a success. Favour loves you! 😊

Olamide Kuforiji of the Gathering Worship Experience: For me, it was limited resources. This became a major challenge at some point during planning. But in the end, we pulled through. The event surpassed my expectations and has also challenged me to do much more subsequently.

Mofope of TEDxCovenantUniversity: It surpassed mine too. I mean, I could not believe it at first, but I am truly grateful to God for how it turned out. After the event, I got lots of feedback from the attendees. Many people said they got clarity about their purpose on earth, and they were fully impacted by the speakers.

Favour of TEDxCovenantUniversity: Right Fope? The feedback we got was overwhelmingly good. Although I didn't really get to stay in the auditorium where the event was happening, I could still feel the excitement of everyone as I was working backstage. I am so happy about how everything turned out, and I would love to be a part of something like this in the future. Let's do it again Fope.

Mofope of TEDxCovenantUniversity: Stay tuned guys!!!

Olamide Kuforiji of the Gathering Worship Experience: Yes to that! Anticipate future editions of the gathering worship experience as well. It will definitely be more creative, impactful, and life-transforming.

Favour of TEDxCovenantUniversity: Personally, I believe that the success of our events wouldn't have been possible without the people who helped, so I would like to know what support systems you had that helped you pull out of the challenges you encountered planning the event. 🍷

Osahon Ehanire of the Garden: Apart from God, I was helped by a number of people, and I just want to use this opportunity to publicly appreciate them once again: Abraham Joyful, Omolayo Toluwalase, Tolu Afilaka, Gbaye Tamilore, Samuel Anefu, Oyinade Priscilla, Samuel Basse, Ayanleke Tranquil, Chima Chibusoma, Bawo Laju, Jomiloju Grace, Obatamilore Maxwell, and to all the others that time would fail me to mention. Thank you and God bless you. 😊

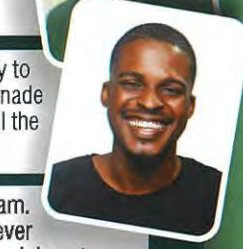

Tolu Afilaka of Jokes On You: The support for Jokes On You was heartwarming. Thank you to all the members of the planning team. When I first started, I didn't have any support systems. The only encouragement were stories I got from role models. So, whenever I felt hooked, they were my help. I would go back to read their stories and learn how they got out of their sticky situations. Now, I do not lack support and the reason is simple. People would only support someone they believe in; they must see that you know where you are going. So my final question is, would you advise a student with a solid events idea to pitch it to the school's management? Is it worth it? 🍷

Osahon Ehanire of the Garden: My sincere advice to anyone who has a dream, or an idea would be to start pursuing your dreams even if you feel unprepared. I have had this idea for over two years and by God's grace, it became a reality on the 28th of May 2022. But my greatest regret is that I didn't start earlier. But it was surely worth it.

Osahon Ehanire of the Garden: Plus, I would be lying to you if I said my allowance didn't increase after that day. But much more important than the monetary reward will be the one that cannot be seen or heard, only felt. The best form of reward to me was that feeling of fulfillment.

Favour of TEDxCovenantUniversity: Pure fulfillment. My final question is... what would you want your legacy in life to be?

Olamide Kuforiji of the Gathering Worship Experience: Hmmmm... Good question.

Covenant University TEDx Is Back and Louder!

By Zoe Komone

The highly anticipated Tedx Covenant University took place on the 28th, May 2022 at the CUCRID Auditorium after a 5-year long hiatus since the last edition.

The theme of the event was 'Evolve' as it was aimed to pass across lessons and experiences that will help cultivate the innovative minds of the Covenant University community.

This year's edition saw influencers across various industries gather to address students from the heart. We had notable personalities like Tomike Adeoye a media personality and brand influencer, Salem King—a popular content/social media strategist, Tunde Onakoya—the founder of Chess in Slums, a non-profit organisation that seeks to expose street children to alternative opportunities using Chess as a means to do so, and finally, Michael Thomas, the executive director of ARM trustees limited.

The event was organised by Mofope Adefuye and Favour Nelson, both 300-level students of Mass Communication who sought to create an impact on the student body using the TEDx platform. They also received lots of support from the student council representatives of the university who collaborated with them to ensure that the event was perfectly realized. This year's edition was hosted by Taiwo Adesope and Haoma Worgwu— both recent graduates of the university.

The event kicked off with a brief introduction and warm welcome address from Favour Nelson, the co-organizer of the event. She gave a brief history of how the vision of the event slowly but finally came into reality. She also welcomed the guest speakers and promised the attendees a wonderful and impactful session, which was nothing short of how the program turned out. It was truly enlightening!

After this, the first speaker, Tomike Adeoye, was invited to the stage for her talk. Her topic was titled, 'My Personality, My Superpower'. In her talk, she spoke about how it is never too late or too early to find your superpower. She stated that "your superpower is not an automatic pass to success, but even when you get 'nos' your superpower is still entirely yours." She also encouraged the audience to value what made them unique and keep developing it to a point where it can be easily monetized.

After Tomike's talk, the spoken word artist, Gbemisola Osho, was invited on stage as she passed a message of hope and love and encouraged the audience to make the most out of their failings. She also passed a message of spirituality as she said "breathe, run, and make sure you sabi Jesus."

Subsequently, there was a 5-minute-long interaction between the hosts and the audience in order to prepare them for the next speaker, Salem King.

Salem King's talk was titled, 'How remark by the organiser, Miss Mofope Adefuye, as she gave a vote of thanks to God, the school, management, speakers, partners, the attendees as well as the volunteers for the success of the event.

TedxCovenantUniversity ended at 2pm as refreshments were served to the attendees as they exited the event to take pictures with the speakers, organisers, and other participants in attendance.

Online Communities save lives. During his 15-minute talk, he stated that one of the reasons he is very intimate with his audience is that it gets cold at the top so there is a need to find and have someone who loves you while you are up there. He advised the attendees to be a part of a community—no matter how small. “Do not go alone” was his recurring advice. He ended by encouraging the audience to maximize their strengths and to find people who believe in what they believe in, those who would cherish them, build them, and help them create the future that they dream of.

After this presentation, there was a performance by the talented Temi Ade who gave a tear-jerking rendition that surely moved the heart of the attendees.

Next, Michael Thomas, delivered an excellent talk on 'How to Blend in To Stand Out'. He told the audience that it is fine if they didn't know where they will be in the next five or ten years, but what matters is they strive to cause a change in their generation. He encouraged them to be curious, unlearn the stereotypes they have been confined in, and relearn new skills. He emphasized the need to remain true to your identity, and he ended by stating that one key feature everyone should cultivate is the ability to adapt to the changing world.

After this insightful talk, a short time slot was given to the sponsors of the event to pitch their brands to the participants. Partners like Revest, Homework and Visapoint spoke about their respective brands and what the Covenant University community could benefit from using the services that they had to offer. A giveaway was also announced and the countdown for the announcement of the winner of the Dubai trip sponsored by Visapoint commenced.

The last talk of the day titled, 'Investing in humanity — the greatest investment of any developing country' was given by the fourth speaker, Tunde Onakoya. He shared a story about how Chess helped him view the world differently. He admonished the attendees to ask reflective questions like 'What is your identity?' 'Are you neglecting your potential?' 'Where does my privilege intercept with someone's repression?' 'How am I going to become a storyteller for untold stories that matter?' He further stated that there are ample opportunities to invest in humanity. He ended with a powerful quote—he said, “The only future worth dreaming of is the one that includes us all.”

After this, there was an interactive session titled 'Share your idea in two minutes, where the members of the audience had the opportunity to pitch their ideas to win various prizes. After this, the winners of both the giveaway and the Dubai trip were announced.

The event ended with a closing

STREAM EDITORIAL INTERVIEW

Mofope Adefuye, Favour Nelson, Osahon Ehanire, Tolu Afilaka, Olamide Kuforiji

the CONVENERS OF CU

Tolu Afilaka of Jokes On You: My legacy would be of someone who came into an unknown land almost empty and in five years managed to carve a niche for himself. I became a voice for people, and whenever my name was mentioned, it brought joy. I was a shoulder to lean on and climb when someone needed to see farther. My legacy is that of a man who said the impossible and did it. Because I did everything I said! 🐶

Olamide Kuforiji of the Gathering Worship Experience: I would like to be remembered as being a resourceful, result-oriented personality and a well-grounded creative voice.

Mofope of TEDxCovenantUniversity: I want to have a legacy of making an impact in the lives of people. I want to be known for my selfless impact.

Stream: This is the perfect point to bring this delightful conversation to an end. It was a very interesting conversation to follow. It was basically a free masterclass on convening an event (CU edition). The message was conveyed expertly and with so much clarity. The highlight for me was the honesty in the discussion. Yes, organizing an event is very challenging, but it is certainly worth it. Thank you all for taking the time to be a part of this conversation. I can't wait to see all the marvelous things the future holds for you. Sending each of you the best wishes from Stream.

😊 Cheers!!! 📎 📷 🎤

Stream Magazine: Please introduce yourself. Who's Eibra?

Eibra: I am Ibrahim Lawal. Eibra is the man who swam through the mud. I express myself irrespective of how odd it might seem.

Stream Magazine: How did the name come to you?

Eibra: I was trying to find a more contemporary stage name for myself, and it just clicked.

Stream Magazine: Give us the full gist.

Eibra: So, initially, it was Ibrados. It was my nickname in primary school. I used the name up to 200 level. It got to a point I just had to change it to Eibra.

Stream Magazine: What are the things you represent as a brand?

Eibra: Progress, Perseverance, Authenticity, and Courage.

Stream Magazine: So, your rap style is Yoruba street, and we know that most of these artistes related to the genre represent the street and grew up having to struggle for the basics. So as a street-style rapper, do you ever feel like an imposter in the genre? If so, what has your experience been like?

Eibra: Honestly, I am from the streets too. I have just been privileged to be here by God's grace and hard work. Being at Covenant University is thanks to a benefactor who sponsored me here. So, I have never forgotten where I come from. And the difference between Olamide and me or any of the street artistes out there is that I have the opportunity to use academics coupled with my music as my route to success.

Stream Magazine: How have Covenant University students responded to your rap style?

Eibra: I have seen love. I started music because I was so messed up when I was younger. So, getting here was very hard for me, and I was looking for a way to be myself and bounce back. Before this, I had stopped music due to religious reasons. Covenant University students have been so supportive.

Stream Magazine: How did the CU Anthem 'money no dey CU' cover come to be? Please walk us through your role in that epic project.

Eibra: AYK buzzed me up and asked me to feature in the song. He told me about his idea; I liked it, and we entered the studio a while later and started recording. Shoutout to Aux; he prepped the beat. Moz online recorded it, and then we shot the video after our exams. And all this happened right here at Covenant University.

Stream Magazine: You recently undertook a position as the director's assistant for the movie 'Blood Covenant' walk us through that experience?

Eibra: Blood Covenant was the project of my life. Being a filmmaker was a fun but stressful experience. And I loved every bit of the process. There was so much love on the set. I met the director Fiyin Gamba through the popularity of CU Anthem. I told him I was down for an internship, so when the time came, we started rolling together, and he took me out.

Stream Magazine: For our readers who want to get into Nollywood or perhaps some other industry but have no connections or anything like that, what would you advise them to do? How can they secure a seat at the table?

Eibra: The best thing to do is to build your portfolio. It was easy for me to gain visibility because these industry giants had seen my work and shown interest. It would help if you let people know what you do.

Stream Magazine: So, you recently started Yours Creativeli. Can you tell us more about what you do with this platform?

Eibra: Yours Creativeli is a platform for students to get hands-on experience in preparation for the industry. I started this to fill a gap I discovered during my Industrial Training. We want to help students get discovered in school before they graduate into the real world. It is possible to get yourself discovered in school. I did.

Stream Magazine: So, this is a little more personal. Can you tell us what you plan to do when you graduate?

Eibra: Fiyin Gamba—the man I now call brother—tells me that I am a man of many opportunities, which resonates with me. So, after I graduate, I am ceasing all these opportunities. This recent filmmaking project has given me access to people I couldn't have dreamt of meeting. So, expect many films from me in the future, although music will always remain my first love and priority.

Stream Magazine: We saved our most profound question for last, what would EIBRA's legacy be? What mark do you hope to live behind?

Eibra: I want to be known for courage and for being crucial to people's success stories.

Stream Magazine: Do you have any parting words for your fans and all our readers before we end the interview?

Eibra: When I say Eni, Eji, Eta, you say Teti (1,2,3...30)

Eibra: Eni, Eji, Eta

Stream: Teti!!

Eibra: Thank you very much.

The Need for Community amongs Creatives

By Johan Martins

One of the smartest things any creative can do is to join a community. The best communities are diverse. They are multigenerational, multicultural, respect different points of view, and serve as a robust platform for collaboration and connection. The most affordable resource any creative can acquire will be a pool of people to learn from, teach to, collaborate with, exchange experiences with, and generally grow with. Being with other people is innate to humanity. We need each other! Community brings with it a sense of trust and belonging. In a community, we have the opportunity to draw upon the gifts of others and also to build into others.

Collaborations are one of the most effective strategies for any creative to expand their audience. Imagine this scenario: you're a content creator with 100 followers, and you partner with another content creator who also has 100 followers. You both then decide to create content together, but at first, you don't consider it a good idea because you both have the same number of followers, and you'd more likely prefer to collaborate with someone with more followers. You are gunning for the top dog. An influencer with over 100k followers sounds more exciting. What you don't know is you stand to gain a lot by collaborating with someone on the same level as you. How? Well, with 100 followers, you both already have a community that would interact with your content more intimately. You can improve your visibility and double your already existing following. And even more importantly, you get to learn and grow with someone together, but you wouldn't get this with an influencer. They have little to gain from you—and you would certainly part with a few Nairas—all for what really?

Covenant University like every other community has its share of very talented creatives ranging from artists to designers, animators to comedians, and filmmakers to musicians. And how well people show up for each other at Covenant University is a topic that is frequently discussed and contested. Those who do not belong to a community are more likely to conclude that the University does not have an active support system for creatives. One needs only to visit Hebron Startup Lab to find out that this is far from the truth. The comedians at Covenant University are known for their unwavering commitment to showing up and showing out. It's truly incredible how they come through for each other. The lack of competition and willingness to support their fellows whenever one of them hosts a show on or off campus is commendable and is exactly what a community should be about.

As a creative, you may occasionally come into contact with clients who require services beyond what you can provide. A photographer, for example, might receive a client who needs a videographer, or a graphic designer might get a job that requires an illustrator. A community provides a network of people that can refer each other for jobs. Many non-creatives wrongly assume that creatives should be able to do the work of others with similar job roles. While it isn't really a creative's job to educate them, many creatives would see this as an opportunity to refer someone they know. And they would most likely recommend someone who is a member of their own community. This 'client-sharing' also happens if some have too much work on their hands. Referrals are key to running any successful creative business and being a part of a community makes it easier to get more jobs.

As creatives, we desperately need each other. Relying entirely on our own ability will not offer us the right opportunities or increase our capabilities in any way. Find your family today!

NOLLYWOOD

NOLLYWOOD AS FORCE BEHIND NIGERIAN CREATIVE ECONOMY

By Oreva Precious Egidi

Nollywood has been and still is a significant employer of labor (possibly the second largest in the nation) for the youth who would not otherwise have access to quality education. With the continued emergence of reality show spin-offs, young men and women have become knowledgeable in both the technical and practical aspects of the industry. However, Prosper Edesiri, the director of Cake, stated that being a filmmaker in Nigeria is draining. According to the acclaimed director, the Nigerian film industry has gone through observable changes over the years, and there has been a drastic change in the concept, quality, and content of Nigerian films. Yet, he believes that the major problem Nigerian filmmakers face in the contemporary industry is the lack of appropriate expertise and funding to handle the production and distribution of their films.

Although Nollywood accounted for 40% of the Nigerian box office, there are no marketing companies specifically for movies. Over the years, it can be said that the Nigerian film industry has made a great impact on the economy of the country and has the potential to resuscitate the country's economy if the conditions are improved for the filmmakers to produce better work and gain more visibility. In 2018, the arts, entertainment, and leisure industry contributed 0.21 percent of Nigeria's GDP, totaling around N270 billion. In the first quarter of 2019, the industry generated over N87 billion, accounting for 0.27 percent of the country's GDP. The Nigerian box office also makes a substantial contribution; N4.3 billion was generated in 2017 and is expected to rise to N6.4 billion by 2022. This is enough evidence to show the extent to which the Nigerian film industry has improved and could still improve with the right expertise targeted at improving the production value and the marketing strategies.

Nollywood has a chance to make a significant difference in Nigeria, but for now, filmmakers around the country still have key issues to deal with in order to reap the full rewards and benefits their international counterparts have profited from.

NIGERIANS MOVING IN SILENCE ...BUT NOTHING WRONG BEING PRIVATE

By Egidi Precious Oreva

Let's be truthful, Nigerians are very secretive. We are a very private people. We keep plans, events, and personal information away from even our friends and family. For instance, many Nigerians prefer not to tell their friends and extended family members about their plans to travel abroad. They would much rather shock them with an #Abroadliving picture. Let's even look at another example; a typical pregnant Nigerian woman would not announce her pregnancy or post pictures of her baby bump on social media until the baby's born. Many Nigerian female celebrities are guilty of this, even if they post a picture of their baby bump; they do this after the baby is born. We are very fond of making moves secretly.

This matter has caused conflicts in many homes and is a harbinger of many strained relationships-- but let's face it. Is it necessary to tell your friends and family about matters in your life? Does anyone need to know the details of your life's plans? Should people take offense at being left in the dark?

Many Nigerians have good reason to treasure their secrets because you can't trust anyone. We have seen it happen over and again. Envious desires stirred in the hearts of friends. You could tell a friend how excellent your partner is, and the next, you hear that your partner has decided that your friend is his better half. Na jazz?! Maybe. And this is probably another reason we hide our accomplishments—the fear of enemies. The fear of an 'attack' is the beginning of wisdom. And we have correctly inherited this fear from our parents, who would mistrust even their closest friends, warning us severely as children not to eat in their houses. We couldn't even enjoy the birthday souvenirs shared by our classmates in peace. Plus, no Nigerian parent would travel to their village in their finest clothes and cars. Like I said—the fear of an 'attack' is the beginning of wisdom.

We move in silence. We keep matters a secret to uphold our pride just in case our plans fail. We still want to lift our heads high without letting others know we've faced inevitable setbacks. This is why we do not trust easily. But isn't this a lonely path? Is there no joy and comfort in having that person who is willing to share their life's journey with you as you would them? Shouldn't the people around you be able to support you through your experiences? And an even more bewildering question is: why do we keep people in our circles that we do not trust?

There is nothing wrong with being private, but we must make sure we have people around us we trust enough to discuss life's challenges and strategize for future successes. As the saying goes, "A problem shared is a problem halved. A joy shared is a joy doubled." Do not suffer in silence.

Although not everyone deserves our vulnerability, if we can try our bests to be better to one another, ending the circle of jealousy and suspicion once and for all, then we may erase this suffocating suspicion we have towards our neighbors. First, we need to ensure that we become trustworthy and are not simply projecting our weak consciences on others. Are you loose-lipped? Mechi onu. A word is enough for the wise.

10 AMAZING EVENTS HELD AT COVENANT UNIVERSITY DURING THE OMEGA SEMESTER

BY ZOE KOMONE

EVENTS

Introduction

Omega semester is known as the 'semester of events,' and like many other students, I always look forward to what's lined up-- from service unit events to student-organized events, and everything in between. In this article, we would be selecting our pick for the top ten events held during the semester. Keep in mind that this list is arranged in no order. So, follow me, and let's trail down memory lane together. Are you ready?! Then let's go!

THE COVENANT UNIVERSITY MUSICAL DEPARTMENT (CUMD) CONCERT

The Covenant University Music Department's (CUMD) annual concert was a blessing to the student body. It was a time of unfiltered joy and praise in God's presence.

The event featured contemporary, traditional, classical, and other genres of gospel music ministered live by the Covenant University Choir, and one couldn't help feeling the utmost satisfaction after the event. Praise God!

CUTG'S DRAMA NIGHT 13

Lights! Camera! Drama!

Drama Night 13 was the moment we really anticipated throughout the year! The most thrilling, exciting, and fantastic event of the season. This year's Drama Night was themed "HERITAGE" starring various talented members of the Covenant University Theatre Group (CUTG). This event took place on May 15, 2022, in the Covenant University Chapel. The event reminded us of our birthright as Christians! Amazing right? Here are a few pictures to reminisce over. Enjoy!

THE GATHERING WORSHIP EXPERIENCE

What a time we had! The Gathering Worship Experience was held at the University Chapel on the 29th of May 2022. This worship experience hosted lots of ministers from within and outside Covenant University. The students experienced peace, and serenity all while worshipping God intimately. It was a very beautiful atmosphere, and the presence of God was felt tangibly. This event was organized by Olamide Kuforiji, the Community Development Officer of the Covenant University Student Council.

ENTREPRENEURIAL DEVELOPMENT STUDIES DAY (EDS Day)

On June 2nd 2022, the EDS day was organized by the Entrepreneurial Development Studies (EDS) department. This event provided a platform for student vendors within the university to sell their products which is usually not allowed in the University. The event welcomed other fast-food restaurants from outside school such as Korede Spaghetti, Chicken Republic, Domino's Pizza, and lots more. The event also featured an entrepreneurial symposium, a fashion show, crafts exhibition booths, and lots of games to unwind after a hectic day.

JOKES

On You (Joy)

EVENTS

Jokes on who?! On you! What an amazing event! This annual comedy show was organized by Tolu Afilaka, a 500-level student at Covenant University. As he graduates this year, this is likely the last edition, and we would certainly miss the array of comedians and the easy-breezy nature of the show. It gave us pure JOY every time!!

the GARDEN

The Garden event certainly deserves its flowers. It was worth every amount spent on the ticket. It was like paying for therapy because it provided the much-needed comfort and light for those who attended. This event was organized to nurture youths and realign their mindsets positively, and with the varied speakers chosen from the student body, how could it not do just that? It was organized by Ehanire Osahon, a 400-level student of Covenant University. The Garden left us feeling more awake than ever.

CAN YOU 17

What is a successful year without a little dance from the best dance group in the world?! Can You 17 was organized by the Covenant University Reflection Dance group and the theme of the event was titled "BY HIS SPIRIT." This event took place on the 5th of June 2022 in the Covenant University Chapel, where different genres of dance such as traditional, contemporary, afro, hip-hop, ballet, and salsa were expertly performed by the group. And even better, we witnessed the greatest collaborations between The Reflection Dance group and the Covenant University Music Department (CUMD), the Covenant University Theatre Group (CUTG), and the Covenant University Alumni group. Amazing doesn't even cut it, and I simply cannot wait for the next edition. Can you?!

Covenant Hosts First Writers Conference, Wins Prizes

The Covenant University Literary and Debating Society (CULDS) recently hosted her first Writers Conference. The event attracted about one hundred and sixty-eight participants both within Covenant University and other neighboring institutions who submitted about 40 prose of 1500 words and poems of forty, lines for the competition.

Some schools represented were Babcock University, University of Lagos, Bowen University, University of Abuja, Caleb University and Bells University of Technology.

Two Guest Speakers, Miss Oyinkansola Olayinka, the author of "Where the Lotus grows" and "A Love for Tomorrow" and Miss Eboseremen Ailenotor, the author of "How to be a worthless Woman" were on hand to train the participants on the art of writing, and also touched on how to market ideas.

In his opening remarks at the event, the Vice Chancellor, Professor Abiodun Adebayo, ably represented by Dr. Kester Onor, who is the South West Coordinator of All Nigerian Universities Debating Council and Chair, Covenant University Literary and Debating Society (CULDS), admonished the students to imbibe a reading culture to improve their lots in the society.

The first prize and the second prize were both won by Covenant University students. The first price (#15000.00) was won by Miss Willoughby Oreoluwa from the department of Mechanical Engineering, with a short prose titled, 'Nostalgic Letter to My Little Nephew', while the second prize (#10000.00) was won by Miss Arogundade Victoria, with a poem titled, 'Limerence.' Many other presentations were made at the event.

The prizes were presented to the winners by the Chairman of the occasion, who is also the Chaplain, Covenant University, Pastor Victor Hill.

Others at the event were the Dean, Student Affairs, Professor David Imhonopi and other senior officers of the University.

CU Graduates 1,934

Ph.D. – 77, M.Sc. – 114, MBA – 20, M.Eng. – 39, M.A. – 7; First Degree – 1,677

Covenant University, one of Nigeria's and Africa's leading institutions of higher learning, graduated a total of 1,934 persons on January 6th, 2023, to award them the first, second, and third degrees in the 17th Convocation Ceremony "Release of Eagles 2022." The details show the first degree was awarded to 1,677 persons with the remaining 257 split into 77 doctoral, and 180 Master of Science degrees.

This year's graduation ceremony was momentous as – Fatima Andat Dashe – already a chartered accountant, with a whopping 5.0 CGPA emerged as the best awardee in not only the Accounting Department and the corresponding faculty College of Management and Social Sciences, but also the entire university. Other impressive awards were Naomi Debo-Adeleye with 4.82 in Political Science, David Nottidge with 4.97 in Mechanical Engineering, and Enoch Aiyenero with 4.96 in Industrial Physics.

The Chancellor of Covenant University and Chairman of its Board of Regents, Dr. David Oyedepo, the institution seeks to help students build a great future through the injection of unique and custom build programs that guarantee a production line for a desired end product. Furthermore, he said, the university's mission is to empower students towards national reconstruction, reconciliation, and socio-economic development toward the restoration of human dignity, resulting in the transformation of the nation of Nigeria.

The Pro-Chancellor and Vice Chairman of the Board of Regents, Bishop David Abioye, corroborated with Dr. Oyedepo, saying that the graduating students have realized their God-given purpose within the period of their academic pursuit in the institution. He added, however, that realizing or discovering one's dream is not the same as actualizing it, stating that students should work hard toward the actualization of their dreams.

The Vice-Chancellor took the audience present at the ceremony through the achievements of the university in the past year.

These include the following:

- Covenant University topped 800 in World University Rankings
• The ranking by the renowned Times Higher Education (THE) makes Covenant University the best private university in Nigeria, Africa, and one of the best in the world.
• Covenant University topped 200 in the emerging economies ranking.
• Covenant University ranks 562 globally among world-leading research universities.

In his conclusion, he congratulated the parents, families, well-wishers, and particularly the graduating students for their remarkable feats, stating that the exploits were a manifestation of the institution's investment in them.

Managing your MONEY!

with A Spending Journal

By Damisa Joy

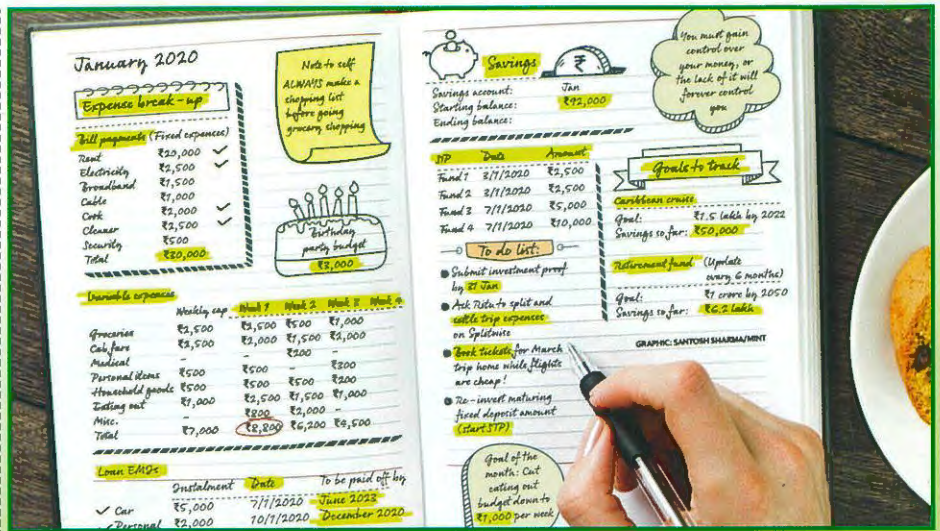

Are you unable to determine where your money is going or why you can't save? You can track your spending in detail by keeping a regular spending journal and spending log. You can discover what you're spending your money on and why by routinely keeping track of your spending patterns and transactions.

A spending diary is a record of each and every purchase you make each day over a certain period of time. For instance, over the course of 30 days. The purpose of keeping a spending diary is to keep you more conscious of how you spend your money, by identifying your spending patterns and helping you identify areas where you can improve.

When creating your budget journal, you must make a commitment to recording something each time you make a transaction over a predetermined period if you want to successfully track your spending. This will enable you to recognize your emotions and comprehend the motivations behind your spending on various things. (Using journal prompts could be useful.)

Every single purchase, from a pack of gum to a cup of coffee to lunch, needs to be recorded in your spending diary. You have two options for recording your thoughts and transactions: either as they happen or at the end of each day. It will help you remember all your transactions if you keep your receipts close at hand. You'd be shocked at how much those small monthly purchases add up. For instance, if you purchased a new handbag even though you didn't actually need it, you would note your emotions and the circumstances surrounding the purchase. Was there a reason you were upset, and purchasing the new handbag helped you "feel better"? This is an essential component of a spending journal because it can assist you in understanding your finances.

Finally, ensuring you include enough information will help you remember what you spent money on when you review your spending at the end of the day or the week. Consider including the following in your journal: that day, the product details, what you spent it on, how much you spent, and how you feel about the purchase? For example, if you bought a coffee from Starbucks, you would enter the date, then describe where and what you bought, followed by the price. You can see where your money is going if you keep track of your transactions this way.

CRIBSTOCK

Introduces
crowdfunding and Real Estate to the Nigerian Market

By Damisa Joy

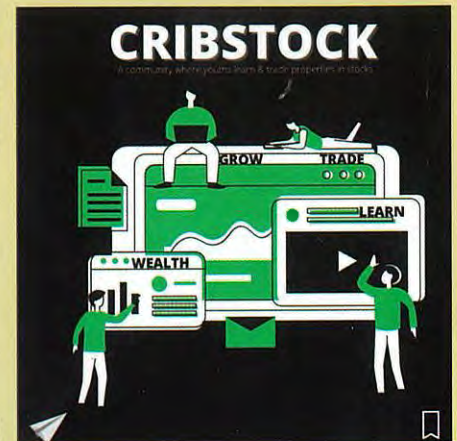

Is it possible for two investment mindsets – one old and one new – to coexist without driving each other insane? That is the central question raised by crowdfunding in the real estate market, and it is one that has received mostly positive responses. This odd couple of crowdfunding and real estate appears to be getting along easily, providing investors with a new way to leverage their real estate investments around the world. One of such platforms that bring such opportunities for Nigerians is Cribstock.

Cribstock is a community where young professionals can participate to own real estate for wealth creation and through this; contribute to infrastructural development in Nigeria. According to Co-founder Oluwadamilola Shofarasin, when asked what made Cribstock different from other real estate investment platforms, she stated, "For years, real estate has been accessible to those with millions and hundreds of millions only." On Cribstock, commercial properties worth millions are divided into 1,000 stocks where each stock represent a 0.10% ownership stake and this opportunity can be accessed by anyone with a few thousand Naira.

This is obviously a brilliant opportunity, as it affords people a chance to get into the real estate market even for as low as 15,000 naira. In addition, these houses displayed on the platform are vetted and when they have been rented or sold, the investors would get their share of the profit. Now, while this is exciting news for those who have always wanted a piece of the action, there are also some risks associated with taking this investment route. One downside to investing with crowdfunding is that the risk of investment default (from real estate developers) is higher for crowdfunding compared to peer-to-peer and direct real estate investment funding. In addition, lack of liquidity, as the absence of a secondary market, restricts easy access to selling opportunities for investors.

However, Crowdfunding in the real estate market promises to be a revolution. It is just now taking off, but already attracting impressive levels of interest from serious investors. While real estate crowdfunding is inherently risky, real estate investments can help diversify your portfolio and provide competitive returns. So, if you are thinking of building a strong investment portfolio on a tight budget? Then you might just want to give Cribstock a try.

QUEST Corner

THE FUTURE OF WORK IN THE GLOBAL FINANCE SERVICES INDUSTRY

By Hanniel Oluwaferanmi Amao

In its simplest form, one of the first things that crosses a proletariat's thoughts when he hears the word "finance" is money. However, civilization, amongst other things, has shown us that finance goes deeper than "cash, cryptocurrency, or any other form of paper currency". Finance is the commercial or government activity of managing money, debt, credit, and investment. It deals with how a government, an organization, or an individual acquires money as well as how they spend or invest such money. It is very well safe to say that without finance, we cannot have financial services like banks, investment companies, accountancy companies, insurance companies, credit unions, credit card companies, etc. Hence, financial services refer to the economic services that are provided by the financial industry.

Even as coined money was not introduced until the first millennium BC, in Sumer (3000BC), transactions were made with the use of grains, copper, and silver. In 1200BC, China used cowrie shells as a form of money. Also, in the Old Testament of the Bible, it was recorded that a man would give the other his sandals to finalize a transaction. "7 (Now in earlier times in Israel, for the redemption and transfer of property to become final, one party took off his sandal and gave it to the other. This was the method of legalizing transactions in Israel.)" ~Ruth 4:7 (New International Version).

Some forms of financial services, such as savings, lending, and investing, have been existent since the beginning of civilization. It is no news that our world has evolved with things and people evolving with it. The world of finance is also not left out of this evolution. Being birthed just when civilization started, the difference between how the world of finance operated in 3000BC is different from the way it operates with the generation Z and the Alpha generation. Given that, we can say that a thousand years from now, the unimaginable might have happened to the world of financial services.

Resultantly, technology has come to stay. Fortunately, these inventions have made life easier for most of us. Although we have these computers, robots, and the like carrying out the tasks that humans ought to, the fact remains that, the probability of the world having a human workforce in the world of finance a thousand years from now is very slim. Robots are servers and waiters in restaurants nowadays, court cases are filed online, court sessions are being held online, and many wonder whether lawyers and judges will be replaced by robots in the future. Nothing is impossible. The same can be said for the work of financial services. Many argue that a time in the world will come when "paper money" will outlive its importance as everything will be invariably digitalized. Already, digitalization in the financial industry such as mobile banking, fintech, blockchain, challenger banks, cloud computing, and many more have begun and has developed swiftly over the years.

Digitalization has improved the financial industry substantially. The top five benefits of the digital evolution of financial management include fewer errors experienced; simplicity and efficiency; helping to better secure funding; enhanced decision-making; and mobile working.

Before the world-changing event of Covid-19, financial institutions have been diverting and carrying out most of their businesses through the various Fintech platforms that have been designed to meet the needs of customers. However, upon the advent of the new normal, a whole lot of things changed, and a whole lot of things are still changing. A massive change has been going on in the Finance industry for at least a decade. It is said that the branch footage has shrunk by 20 percent in the USA and about 60 percent in Nordic countries. All this in barely a decade. What will happen a hundred years from now?

Research from Excellerate clearly stated that online banking is here to stay. Interestingly, according to Gartner, it is said that by 2030 about 80% of financial service firms will go out of business. All these are indications that individuals must start trying to find ways to diversify and develop their tech skills.

With time, these financial institutions are going to go through a technological transition into FINTECDOM. T

"It is safe to say that the future of banking appears promising; however, the evolving customer expectations and shifting customer sentiments demand an agile approach that flexes to the evolving situation."~Excellerate (How Fintech is Disrupting Traditional Banking and Trends for 2021).

A Meal That Captures Hearts'
-Ishiekwene Geraldine

As a certified 'foodie', I've had the opportunity of tasting cuisines from all over the world; ranging from Algerian Couscous to Starch and Banga Soup from my home land, Delta State. All of which have been intricately designed to not only satiate hunger, but also give our taste buds an immense amount of joy.

Of all the foods I've tasted, the one I have fallen deeply in love with, is the Ekpang Nkukwo; a dish that originates from the Efik and Ibibio people, in the Southern parts of Nigeria. This dish combines two somewhat similar root crops, Coco Yam and Water Yam, as well as other Yam crops of one's choice, to make its base. It is on these food items, that the rest of the meal is made. Other ingredients used in preparing Ekpang Nkukwo include, coco yam leaves, periwinkle, red oil, dried fish, and cow meat; all of which add up to create this highly nutritional meal.

The coco yam leaves, which serve as a wrapping for the grated coco yam and water yam mix, is rich in magnesium, vitamins A, C, E and B6, as well as a good amount of protein. All these nutrients build my immune system, and meet my needs as a growing woman. The variety of sea foods contained in this dish also provide me with iron, vitamin B12, and zinc, and prevents the onset of diseases. There are many more health benefits I've enjoyed from consuming Ekpang Nkukwo, which time may not permit me to mention.

My first encounter with the work of art I now call my favourite food, was during a 'Foods and Nutrition' class I was offered in Secondary School. I and my classmates were taught to prepare the dish by the subject teacher. I remember seeing a couple of my classmates scooping spoons of the almost ready meal from the pot, to eat. It was very funny at first, until it was time for our teacher to share the food amongst us. It was very disappointing to see that the amount of food I was given wasn't up to half of a 'take-away' plate. It then dawned on me that I should have stopped my classmates from stealing the food while I had the chance to. After that day, the only thing I could think about was how delicious the meal was.

I am yet to find something that captures hearts as much as Ekpang Nkukwo has captured mine.

CHILDHOOD WONDER
Emmanuel Fayoyin

My earliest travel memory is unforgettable.

Now, the places I love going to most are airports, but the trip I recall and cherish most was the earliest one I remember, which happened when I was five years old.

We were on a trip to St. Louis for my grandmother's 50th birthday. I liked it, first, because of how large the airport looked and how vast the aircraft was.

I also liked how everyone called me cute. (I mean, I knew I was.)

I enjoyed sitting by the window where my mom told me to and watching the entire world shrink into a maplike size, as well as the attendant's instructions (even though I couldn't catch a single word).

I also loved the food which, I remember, was hotdogs and orange juice, although I told everyone I didn't.

I remember being confused when I went to urinate. I wondered where it went after I had flushed.

The reason I cherish this outing more than any other is that I was fascinated by everything from beginning to end. So, I want you all to realize that life is way more interesting and much more fun when you try to be amazed by the things around you. There will always be something to capture your attention if you look hard enough for it.

It's all just like the renowned Belgian artist, Erik Pevenagie, once said, "If we allow ourselves to stay amazed and astounded at the vibrant instants of every day and do not feel ashamed of admitting to being speechless or dumbfounded sometimes, we can uncover unsuspected sparkling gems hidden in the nooks and crannies of our mind."

10 HABITS THAT WILL TRANSFORM YOUR LIFE

By Damilola Agbetuyi

tarting now, and starting small, is the key to making habits stick. In this chaotic world we live in, here are some of my tried and tested habits that will help you feel more organized and in control.

1. Create A Healthy Morning Routine

When I wake up, the first thing I do is pray, then I make my bed, eat breakfast, and get ready to leave. This is something I do every morning. Yes, repeating the same thing again and over can become tiresome, but doing these things gives me a feeling of organization and balance in my life.

2. Positive Affirmations

Make it a habit to say something positive in your life every day. The tongue has tremendous power and depending on how you use it, it can have a positive or negative impact on your life. ('The positive thinker sees the invisible feels the intangible and achieves the impossible' ~ Winston Churchill)

3. Learn to say NO

Yes, it is acceptable to say no; you do not need to feel obligated to say yes in every case, nor do you need to please everyone by saying yes; simply, pleasing everyone is difficult. Your mental health is really important, and having to say yes to everyone might have a negative impact on it. Imagine saying yes to ten people and then not having time for yourself; everything around you would suffer as a result.

4. Read Read Read

Reading books is a fantastic method to broaden your horizons and gain an advantage over others. Knowledge is the most potent weapon you can have. Reading has been shown to improve the brain and reduce stress because it focuses the brain on a single task and provides the reader with meditative properties that reduce stress levels.

5. Enforce the one-minute rule

Have you ever questioned why you have so many responsibilities? Maybe it's the tiny things that have now accumulated and turned into shambles that you have to spend your entire day cleaning up. The one-minute rule was coined by author and happiness expert Gretchen Rubin, who described it as simple and effective, and I couldn't agree more. Consider how much time you could save if you opted to wash the dishes or make your bed the minute it was possible.

6. Exercise

Do you require an emotional boost? Or do you need to de-stress after a long day? A workout can do the trick; in addition to boosting your physical appearance, exercise can improve your mood and help you think more clearly.

Exercise will help you sleep better and wake up feeling more refreshed.

7. Spoil yourself

You've put in a lot of effort and devoted all of your energy to obtain a specific objective. Why don't you set aside a day to treat yourself? Get that ice cream, get that bag, get that shoe, eat that feast; you've earned it. Not only is it satisfying to reward yourself for working hard, but it also triggers good emotions in the brain, leading to the understanding that your efforts are rewarded.

8. Plan your day

You can save ten hours of work by planning for one hour. Everything is less stressful when it is organized. Before you leave for the day, make a detailed plan of everything you'll do, including what you'll eat. This allows you to better manage your time and make your day more effective.

9. Social media detox

Simply put, a social media detox entails abstaining from all kinds of social media for a period of time. It's a fantastic approach that encourages self-control. The first step towards gaining this self-control is to avoid going on social media first thing in the morning. Establish clear boundaries for yourself.

10. Meditate and Evaluate

After the hustle and bustle of the day is done, sit back, relax, and go over everything that happened during the day, looking over the mistakes you made, the things you did right, and the things you learned, and ask yourself, "Have my actions today contributed to the person I want to be?" If they haven't, assess and consider how you can improve.

e need to know how to balance our other activities and still get good grades in school. It is a lot to handle and that's why I have decided to write this post. Here are some tips that have helped me manage my time effectively thus ensuring I make the most of my school life and still thrive career-wise.

• Know your priorities and compulsory activities

My mentor always says that in a world of so many distractions, there is a need to find the right signal and focus on that very thing. In school, there will be a lot of things competing for your attention. Whether it is that event or that new club coming up. I don't need to join something if it doesn't align with my goals. You need to also know those activities that you needn't miss out. Things like classes, chapel service (if you attend Covenant University), and others. This helps you draft your personal timetable so you would know when you have free time and when you can fit those extra activities. I do this all the time and trust me; it has helped give structure to my day as well as my week and I now know what to do at any given period.

• Plan your days the night before

The little time you spend planning your day and even your week ahead saves you a lot of wasted time the next day. When you know the top tasks you want to accomplish the next day, you wake up with a purpose each day. On the day of writing this post, I knew that I wanted to write this the night before so I already wrote my outline and prepped for it.

• Set SMART goals

In case you are not familiar with the acronym, SMART

How I manage my time effectively as a student

By Favour Nelson

stands for:

Specific Measurable Actionable Realistic Timely.

Your goals need to be specific. You want to be successful, yeah? Well, this goal is nice to have but incredibly vague. Successful as what? In which industry? What exactly do you want to be known for? Your goals need to be measurable. How would you measure your success? How would you measure your impact? Through followers? Subscribers? Money? Fame? How would you record your progress? However, let's not confuse being realistic and limiting together. A wise person once said, "A goal without a deadline is merely a wish." It is one thing to set all kinds of goals while in university, but it is a completely different thing to set SMART goals.

• Manipulate your environment for maximum productivity

Another thing that helps me is being intentional about the way my space is arranged so that I would follow my routines and start my day the right way. My cup and tea pack are on my table together with my planner, my bible, and my devotional. All are well arranged on my bedside table.

• Categorise your tasks (Phone, internet, no internet, no battery)

This tip has helped me so much to achieve maximum productivity even when I don't have my key devices with me (Phone, Tablet, Laptop) In our present age, everything is done online. So, when there is no Wi-Fi or data, it feels like the world is coming to an end for most people. But not for me.

Every time I make my to-do list or brain dump, I always take note of the tasks that I can do without Wi-Fi or even without any gadget and all. Don't waste your time being idle or playing when you can be doing things that will help you in the long run and help you to achieve your goals in a shorter time frame.

• Self-discipline is key

Self-discipline is doing the right thing at the right time. It is doing things, 'not as convenient but as demanded.' If we want to manage our time well we need to spend the 86,400 seconds we have in a day, the right way. We need to practice delayed gratification towards activities that we know will take our time.

We need to ask ourselves 'Is what I am doing presently going to contribute positively to the future I am trying to create?' By doing this we will be conscious of every activity we engage in.

I hope you find this article helpful and useful in your journey to becoming your best self.

Keep being productive!

It's the End of an Era, No More iPods

By Christopher Durojaiye

The age of the Apple iPod is nearly ending, with Apple announcing its plans to stop manufacturing newer ones. The importance of this device is well known, especially for Covenant university students who majorly use iPods since the ban on phones by the university. The iPod was important to us all in one way or the other and would be dearly missed. Well! Not to worry, here are the top 5 devices that could reasonably replace this handy little device and still comply with the university's standards.

5: Techno P701: The Techno P701 tablet is not the flashiest device, but it is very cheap compared to other options on this list. It has very high durability. It is considered the Nokia 3310 of our generation due to its ability to survive high falls. It also holds longer battery life. A full charge can last at least half a day, depending on what tasks are carried out. Although a problem with this tab includes its processor as it is prone to lag, the device is recommended if, as a Covenant University student, you want a supporting device for your laptop. It could fit in most pockets. It is lightweight and has a bright screen that ensures the ease of basic day-to-day student activities, including online tests.

Price: ₦100,000 on Yaoota.

4) Microsoft Surface Go 3: It's on the list also because of its affordability. It has a long-lasting battery of about 12 hours and can act as a laptop if its optional keyboard is purchased. It also has a high-quality webcam that is favourable for those who engage in virtual meetings. It is lightweight and has an excellent price-to-performance ratio. It has facial recognition features for added security and a high-quality processor with 4 gigabytes of ram and 64 gigabytes of storage. The downsides to it are that the colour accuracy is not strong enough for creative professionals, and it is prone to lagging/stuttering when multitasking.

Price: ₦164,000 on Jumia

3) Galaxy Tab S8 Ultra, 512GB, Graphite (Wi-Fi): This device is the most recent of the Samsung Galaxy range and makes this list due to its unique features and top-of-the-tier... well, everything. But the challenge we have with this device is its pricing. It's certainly not pocket friendly and is not advisable for students with a tight budget. However, the pricing is equally understandable because its high processing power would give many devices a run for their money. It is that efficient.

Price: ₦500,000 on Konga

2) iPad Pro: The iPad Pro is easily the best tab on the list coming in at number 2. It is also expensive and possesses work-like features. As a student, unless you have a job as a graphic designer, video editor, or professional gamer, this tab may be an overkill for your day-to-day student activities. It can render videos in 4k, has a high processing speed, and has so many mind-blowing features that would be a waste in untrained hands. However, if you require something that goes above and beyond, then this is ideal.

Price: ₦650,000 on Konga

1, Apple iPad: Topping our list is the Apple iPad; this comes in at number one because it is almost a replica of the iPod operating system-wise. It is suitable for gamers, streaming videos, browsing the web, and multitasking without sacrificing performance. It is easy to use and has a high-quality processor that can handle many tasks. It is also great for creative professionals due to its high-quality display. It has a touch id sensor which ensures extra security, and the battery lasts for up to 10 hours a day. It also has a focus mode that limits app usage and is helpful for students prone to distractions. It showcases a split-screen feature and boasts 256 gigs worth of storage. Although the iPad Pro performs better than the Apple iPad, the Apple iPad tops the list because it is suitable for students and much cheaper than the iPad pro.

Price: ₦350,000 on Konga

5 IT skills You'll Need To Stand Out in 2022

By Durojaiye Christopher

Working in IT can involve anything from fixing a worker's wifi problems to developing a company's new cloud infrastructure. The skills you need to know to get a job in the IT field can vary greatly depending on your role because the work is so diverse. To determine the skills you should concentrate on acquiring, look through a few listings of jobs you are interested in.

1. Safety

Any IT team should start with security in mind. You can learn concepts that are beneficial to understand for security reasons by beginning your career in a help desk, networking, or system administration role. The following abilities can help you become qualified for entry-level and higher IT security positions, such as information security analyst.

- Knowledge of network, software, and physical security
- Installing routers and firewalls
- Data protection
- Threat analysis and a strategy for risk reduction
- Understanding of compliance laws and regulations like PCI-DSS, HIPAA, and CCPA
- Penetration testing and ethical hacking

2. Programming

Those who want to create software, websites, and web applications must be able to program. IT professionals who want to automate tasks will also find it helpful. The following languages are frequently asked of programmers and can be requested of IT specialists as well. Browse through programming language courses to get started.

- Python •C++ •JavaScript •Ruby •PowerShell

3) Networks and systems

A key component of an IT team's job is making sure networks and computer systems run efficiently. System administrators and network administrators are typical jobs that specialize in this skill set. Working in cloud administration or security can benefit from having system and network skills as well. Basic examples of these abilities include:

- Managing a variety of operating systems, such as Windows, Linux, or Mac
- The process of setting up and installing computer hardware and software
- Applications and cloud administration
- Upkeep of virtual private networks, storage area networks, wide area networks, and local area networks (VPNs)

- Troubleshooting
- Assisting staff with technical issues

4) Data Analysis

Data analysis skills will be helpful for a variety of IT tasks. Teams can identify security threats or operational inefficiencies by keeping an eye on performance data. Data engineers and database administrators work with data in the IT industry.

- SQL •Statistics •Python

5. DevOps

The term "DevOps," which combines the terms "development" and "operations," serves as a link between the IT and software development teams. DevOps expertise can be useful in both the IT and development aspects of managing an organization, despite being a field unto itself. Being a DevOps engineer can mean working in the field. You may require the following abilities:

- Having knowledge of the continuous delivery theory
- Technologies for containers like Kubernetes or Docker
- Python, Ruby, and C are examples of scripting languages.
- Knowledge of cloud operations

A LETTER TO MY UNBORN CHILD

-ODUGBEMISOLA OSHO

Dear Child
When you are born and about to figure out life
Breathe,
See, life can be overwhelming I won't lie
Life may be tough
But above all make sure say you sabi God.

Run,
Not hide and seek
Remember to chase your dreams
Go after as many as you please
Ask the almighty for directions
Have not the spirit of fear
Live fearless
But fierce
Be free
For the joy of the Lord is your strength

Dear Child
Love gracefully,

Live elegantly,
Spread kindness and love
Be humble
For humanity is love and peace
Be nice but have boundaries
Be helpful but don't go borrowing.

Hold Razors between your teeth
Cut unkind advances from people
From thoughts, from imaginations
Be courageous
Be bold.

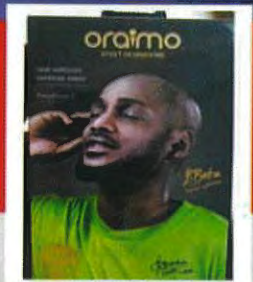

My beautiful munchkins
Ask God for direction o
So you won't walk in the cricked path of life
In seeking a partner ask God for which
'Cos our there is brutal
Above all
Remember to live like kids
To LIVE, LOVE AND LAUGH

LET THERE BE light ...ALREADY! A Word on Electricity

By Adebayo Richard

“Now the earth was formless and void, and darkness was over the surface of the deep. And the Spirit of God was hovering over the surface of the waters. And God said let there and there was light, and God saw that the light was good, and He separated the light from the darkness.” Genesis 1:2-4.

The electric light is easily one of the everyday conveniences that affect our lives. It was invented in the traditional sense in 1879 by Thomas Alva Edison, who created the first commercially practical incandescent light. He was neither the first nor the only person trying to invent the incandescent light bulb. In fact, some historians claim there were over 20 inventors of incandescent lamps prior to Edison's version. However, Edison is often credited with the invention because his version was able to outstrip the earlier versions due to three factors: an effective incandescent material, a higher vacuum than others were able to achieve, and a high resistance that made power distribution from a centralized source economically viable. This discovery marked the beginning of commercially manufactured light bulbs, and in 1880, Thomas Edison's company, Edison Electric Light Company began marketing its new product. It is known that Thomas Edison failed nine thousand nine hundred and ninety-nine times before he invented the light bulb. If this is true, what necessity must have driven a man to try and fail this many times?

According to the Premium Times newspapers, The Nigerian government says it will sell electrical power through its generation companies to four West African countries.

The countries are Togo, Burkina Faso, the Republic of Benin, and the Niger Republic.

This is truly baffling. Nigeria, a nation with a low electricity per capita ratio, has ironically been selling electricity to the Benin Republic, Togo, and Niger for years. The reason our leaders give is that Nigerians will benefit from the deal in terms of revenue and job creation.

Ideally, a man who chooses to feed the children of outsiders must first ensure that there are no starving children in his own house. So, if Nigeria supplies electricity to four African countries, why don't we have a steady supply of power in Nigeria? What is the function of the PHCN? How can the countries we sell electricity to have more than we who own it?

According to lightening Africa, A program designed to impact 6 million people.

“Millions of Nigerians do not have access to grid electricity, relying instead on polluting lighting sources such as kerosene lanterns, candles, and torches. The situation in rural areas is particularly acute with only 41.1% grid access rate. And even among those who have access to the grid, 40% are 'under-electrified' – meaning they have less than 12 hours of grid of electricity per day.”

Research has revealed that 1.8 million out of the population of 182 million Nigerians are among the people impacted the most. The electricity access rate, in rural areas, is 41.1 %, the urban area is 86%, and the national level is 59.3%. this statistic shows only one in five people have power from the electricity grid.

A significant hindrance has been the amount of capital (money) needed to produce a constant power supply in the country. More specifically, Nigeria has endured a great deal of trouble securing enough funding to develop any sort of new energy sources or maintain old ones.

One possible solution that the government should be willing to explore is to attract public and private investments into the electricity sector. This is because an electricity reform project would require a lot of money. These funds would then be judiciously used to send meters to everyone's house, to put more wires, more transmission and distribution lines, and more transformers in all the places where it is needed. This ought to be done urgently because, with a quickly growing population, the need to improve the power sector has become even more essential to our survival.

World Bank, AAU, NUC Evaluation Teams Applaud Improved Covenant ACE Operating Capacity

team from the World Bank, Association of African Universities (AAU) and the National Universities

Commission (NUC) on monitoring and evaluation visit to Covenant Applied Informatics and Communication Africa Centre of Excellence (CApIC-ACE) domiciled at Covenant University has commended the level of work being done in the centre.

Speaking during a courtesy visit to the Vice-Chancellor and members of the Analyst, from the Association of African Universities (AAU), Mr Ankomah Kwaku, said the last time the team visited in 2022 it was just 30 percent work that was done in the Centre, but was proud to announce that the Covenant Africa Centre of Excellence is operating now at 51 percent capacity.

"We are here to verify ongoing projects of the Centre, and give needed support and approval for required funds to drive the mission of the Centre," he enthused. Mr Kwaku, who came with 6 other members of the and called for improved performance from the Centre by the next evaluation visit so as to have access to available funds needed to drive the various researches in the Centre.

The Deputy Centre Leader Covenant Applied Informatics and Communication Africa Centre of Excellence (CApIC-ACE), Professor Emeka Iweala, appreciated the World Bank, AAU and NUC representatives for giving adequate guidance and support to the Centre that has resulted in the immense impact the Centre has been able to generate in a short time.

Putting Your Money to Work with Serial Investor, Bolu Okunade meet Boluwaduro Okunade, a 500-level student of Covenant University, founder, chief trader, and chief analyst at TradeWithBolu, an institute that offers a variety of courses to more than 1000 students who are interested in the foreign exchange financial sector. He is also the co-founder at Revest Investment Limited, Myfxtracker, and Vestducation. His life's mission lies in seeing young people achieve true prosperity.

Stream: How do you balance being a student with being an entrepreneur?

Bolu: A lot of people are so focused on the present that they do not see the future. The truth is, if you stay in an academic atmosphere, the essence and effect of academics in the next ten years would be emphasized. I have had conversations with some successful people and one thing I realize is that you can be educated and not be intelligent. Intelligence is the ability to apply content to the context of life. The version of education we receive in Nigeria does not make us intelligent, what does is personal development. So, I put a fraction of my attention into my education and then dedicate the rest to personal development.

Stream: How do I determine what financial investment instrument works for me?

Bolu: I am sure that not everyone would be a billionaire through the foreign exchange route, some people have made it through other instruments. In business, waiting for perfection leads to an endless wait, you have to start in order to eventually attain perfection. Start something you love. It could be a business that people need and are willing to pay for, and please put your services out there. Just start something. And as you continue, always take calculated risks.

Stream: What should I do if my business does not get enough feedback?

Bolu: There are two things, either you are selling the wrong product, or you have the right product and the wrong crowd. You must ensure that your products appeal to the environment you operate in, that way it becomes easier to receive feedback. Also, be mindful of the fact that not all customers are your customers. It's your job to find who has your money, these people...your customers, would be more likely to give feedback for a product or service they have paid for.

Stream: What inspired Vestducation?

Bolu: I started getting questions from a recurrent need, 'where do I put my money?'

Most people do not know the basics of building an investment portfolio. Others invest their money and lose it because they do not have a proper understanding of what building an investment portfolio entails, they have no knowledge of risk, assets diversification, asset class, and all the other pretty important stuff. So, I sat down for 48 hours and built a website to help people have common investment knowledge. It would delve in-depth into the world of investment and help you understand how you can become a part of that world. It also has a training program called Vestology which was created with the chief aim of helping you become an investment expert.

Stream: Thank you Bolu for making out the time to sit with us. This was truly an insightful interview. I would say the action plan for me is to ensure that I connect with you on any of the platforms you have mentioned so that I too can start my own investment journey. Thank you again for your time, and all the best wishes for you and your various endeavors.

STYLE 101:

Red Carpet, Fashion and Style @

By Anjola Aluevbose

ndeniably, red-carpet events are one of the most exciting cultural moments for fashion lovers worldwide. Put more emphatically...we love red carpets! We love how creative our favorite celebrities get with their wardrobe choices and how they embody the themes given for the event with their said choices.

Year in and out, we see our favourite celebrities sporting exclusive names and clothing designs, and while sometimes they pull it off successfully, other times—they miss the whole thing entirely. Red carpet events have existed longer in America than in Nigeria, we could rightfully say that this glorified fashion contest was 'learned' from Hollywood, but it seems that Nigerian celebrities have bodied this culture—because this year, they did not come playing. The African Magic Viewer's Choice Awards (AMVCAs) proved just that.

The AMVCAs is an annual accolade presented by MultiChoice, acknowledging outstanding achievements in television and movies. The inaugural Africa Magic Viewers' Choice Awards ceremony occurred in Lagos in Nigeria on 9 March 2013 and was televised live in more than 50 countries. For this year's edition, the AMVCAs revealed to the guests that the theme of their dress code was "Royalty." So, here are the four looks that caught our attention and managed to speak to the theme in more ways than anticipated.

1) Osas Ighodaro (The Moon Goddess)

Osas Ighodaro resembled the moon goddess in this shiny ensemble styled by Nigerian fashion guru Veekee James. She looked every inch the star that she is. She has been a delight to watch on and off screen, and her contribution to the growth of the Nollywood industry has earned her the award for 'best actress' this year.

2) Erica Nlewedim (The Island Princess)

Erica Nlewedim looked as stunning as ever as she walked into AMVCAs 2022, showing off her neckline in the sea-green bodice dress. Turkish designer Patrcja Kujawa styled Erica to serve us class and luxury, and she came out looking all shades of pretty. Spot the details in the dress. Only true royalty could afford such standards of expertise. We duff our hats humbly, Princess Erica.

3) Denola Grey (Milord)

Denola Grey, 31, appears no older than 18 and is a fashion god. Denola Adepetun's sophisticated and suave styles continue to bring art to fashion. The fashion icon is known for his impeccable suit styling and serves looks at every opportunity. Following his appearance at the 2020 AMVCAs, where he wore a suit inspired by a Bostonian Museum piece, Denola returns to the red carpet with a perfectly tailored three-piece headed suit that earned him the title of 'best-dressed male' at the 2022 AMVCAs.

4) Bonang Matheba (Princess Bubblegum)

I have never seen a celebrity wear pink so subtly that it could melt your heart in the history of the AMVCAs. South African TV host Matheba stole the show with her appearance and four outfit changes. Bonang began with a furry high-necked outfit that made her look like a mystical creature in pink; the second outfit – a royal blue floor-length lush dress made of sequence fabric – screamed quality and luxury. But it is her first cozy outfit that wins her a spot on this shortlist.

Workout & Diet

Routines of 4 Famous Pro-Athletes

By Awe Mofeoluwa

Have you ever wondered what an athlete's diet is like and how they keep up with it? Good healthy living and diet are essential in our daily living; aside from healthy living, we must try to engage in exercise and sports that we are comfortable doing, at least 3-4 times a week.

Every athlete strives for a competitive advantage, and a comprehensive eating plan that matches these physical demands are required for daily training and recovery.

Let's dig into some of our famous pro athlete's life choices that make all the difference:

SERENA WILLIAMS:

Serena Williams is a black American professional lawn tennis player. Serena is a talented and skilled player; she is considered one of the all-time great women's tennis players; she's the man in the game. The 23 grand slam winner was born on the 26th of September 1981 and is 40 years old and married to Alexis Ohanian, and they both have a lovely daughter; Alexis Olympia Ohanian Jr. Serena Williams is 176cm- 5'9" in height and weighs 70kg- 155lbs, how did she achieve this? Well, by proper diet and workout.

Let's take a look at her journey doing this:

Serena isn't a workout aficionado; she follows a strenuous workout daily routine, and she does this to maintain a healthy body and keep herself from injury, most especially internal damage. Serena is well known for her body fitness, abs, and a well-shaped curvy booty; her primary focus when working out is getting rid of body fat; I mean, who doesn't want to have this body goal that Serena has? This is someone whose workout is high-intense and loves switching it up; girls and guys, let's up our game!!!

When Serena works out, she focuses on different body parts and uses additional workout equipment. She has different segments, including her arm, core, leg, and booty.

Workout & Diet

Routines of 4 Famous Pro-Athletes

Let's take a look at them:

Serena's Arm Workout includes:

- Plank Row
- Rolling Knee
- Resistance Band Hips Extensions
- Fitness Ball Transfer

P.S: she does this as many reps as possible for 5-6minutes.

Serena's Core and Leg Workout include:

- Leg Crunch, horizontal followed by vertical
- Bicycle Crunch
- Pillar Holds
- Dumbbell Step-up
- Dumbbell Walking Lunges

P.S: she does three sets, each with 8-12 reps each.

Serena's Booty Workout includes:

- Barbell Box Squat
- Barbell Front Squat
- Barbell Pause Squat

P.S: she does 3-5 sets each with 8-12 reps each.

If you are a beginner, take it easy on these workouts; these are intensive, but with practice and consistency, you will get there; easy does it too.

Serena's Diet:

When Serena plays a tournament, she follows a raw and vegan diet, but when she is off-season (not playing any game), she relaxes her diet, which includes proteins and cheats. To obtain the nutrition she requires for a healthy lifestyle, she consumes plenty of nuts, lentils, beans, and sprouted quinoa. Occasionally she consumes fried chicken, moon pie, and grits.

For breakfast, she has; Oats, which include strawberries, almond butter, and tangerines. She also has supplements which are: oil oregano and garlic, a multivitamin, and a protein shake, which helps her in boosting her metabolism.

For late morning snacks, she has; toasted Ezekiel bread, a type of bread made with sprouted-seed flowers, and she has this alongside almond butter.

For lunch, she has; a salad that consists of lettuce, spinach, mandarin oranges, lime juice, cherry tomatoes, onions, pita croutons, and sliced almonds.

She has; fat-burning drinks, fat-burning tea, cinnamon, and lemon juice for afternoon snacks.

She has; brown rice with chia seeds and chia hemp with fresh vegetables for dinner.

NOVAK DJOKOVIC:

Djokovic is a 35years old Serbian professional lawn tennis player; he is 1.88m in height and weighs 77kg, he was born on the 22nd of May 1987, and he is married to Jelena Djokovic, and they both have two beautiful children; Tara Djokovic and Stefan Djokovic. Now, striving to be the best in the world at any sport is no laughing or joking matter; it necessitates hard work, dedication, and consistency that the average person does not even approach. Novak Djokovic has been that person in lawn tennis who strives to be the best player in the world. He has so far maintained that status, and his career has seen him win 18 Grand Slams and 82 ATP (Association of Tennis Players) singles titles. How cool is that?

Unlike many other professional athletes that wake up in the morning and work out before training, Djokovic's morning routine is entirely different; here is how he does his workout.

Djokovic usually trains before his workout. This helps him to stretch his entire body thoroughly and helps rid muscle stiffness from sleep, making his movements on the lawn tennis court smoother, swifter, and more seamless. As said earlier, Djokovic, unlike other athletes, begins his workout sessions in the afternoon, proving that finding what works for you, no matter how unpopular, is crucial to your success.

Novak Djokovic goes to the gym to work on his weight and resistance. This is because, aside from stamina and endurance, he is required to have immense arm and shoulder strength due to his profession. He makes pull-ups, triceps, pulldowns, bench presses, box jumps, side lunges, and barbell squats. Asides from these workouts, getting a massage is also part of his workout routine because he understands that if you don't respect your body when it's tired or ill by allowing it to rest and renew, it won't respect you when it's time to compete. He also engages in foam roller movements such as the lower and upper back roll, hamstrings and quadriceps roll, and calf and shoulder roll. He also spends much time in a workout pod, an egg-shaped pressure chamber that improves blood circulation and helps his muscles recover from the wear and tear he endures all day.

Djokovic's diet includes gluten, dairy, sugar-free, good proteins, and good carbs. Here's how Djokovic eats in a day:

For breakfast, he has a bowl of muesli which consists of organic, gluten-free rolled oats, cranberries, raisins, sunflower seeds, and almonds.

He has gluten-free bread or crackers with avocado or tuna for a morning snack.

For lunch, he has gluten-free pasta primavera with mix-green vegetables.

For an afternoon snack, he has an apple with cashew butter.

For dinner, he has salads which consist of kale caesar and tuna niçoise.

BRUNO FERNANDES:

Fernandes is a 27-year-old Portuguese professional footballer who plays midfielder for Manchester United and Portugal National Team. He was born on the 8th of September 1994 and is married to Ana Pinho; they both have two beautiful children; Matilde Fernandes and Goncalo Fernandes. Fernandes is 1.79m in height and weighs 69kg; he is well noted for his goal-scoring ability, playmaking ability, leadership, work ethic, and penalty-scoring. Fernandes has scored so many goals for his dear and beloved football club, Manchester United, and how did he do this? By dieting and exercising to be fit and light weighted.

Although Fernandes isn't as open as the others about his diet, and most of his training is usually done with his teammates, we have a faint idea of how he worked out during the lockdown:

When Fernandes wakes up in the morning, he has his breakfast, then he goes for a walk with his dog, and when he returns from that, he has his first training by doing as many ab crunches as possible. And after his first workout, he then

Let's look at the diet plan Giannis follows to maintain his physical fitness. When playing any tournament, he eats carbs and protein so that he doesn't run out of energy when working out, but his intake of carbs is moderate because he still needs to drop a few pounds and grow muscles. When he isn't playing, he lives on fast food. However, he has now increased the number of fruits and vegetables in his diet.

~GIANNIS ANTETOKOUNPO

Now that you are all geared to put your muscles to work, here are a few inspirational quotes to keep you energized as you start your workout and diet journey:

1. Your diet is number one, you can live in the gym, but if you don't eat clean, you're wasting your time.
2. Your body reflects who you are. If you want to look healthy, you will have to be healthy.
3. Only you can change your life nobody can do it for you.
4. Working out is a slow process, but quitting won't speed it up.
5. Each new day is an opportunity to improve yourself; take it and make the most.

ounds like school spirit?! Well, it certainly is. This year's Chancellor's cup disproved popular beliefs that Covenant University students do not support sports teams during their games. Because, Oh! What a turnout!

The once silent stadium came alive with sounds of chants and cheers signaling the awakening of school spirit. Sports, tournaments, and games have become an important deal at Covenant University...and we are completely here for it. Shout out to all the athletes who sacrificed and pushed themselves to make this year's tournament incredibly entertaining.
